In an uncertain and changing world the importance of signs and signposts is undisputed. The wise men of old recognized them. The sooth-sayers of "them thar hills" relied on them. Neither a wise man of old nor a superstitious sooth-sayer, the GWHS student is daily aware of the value of concrete signs!

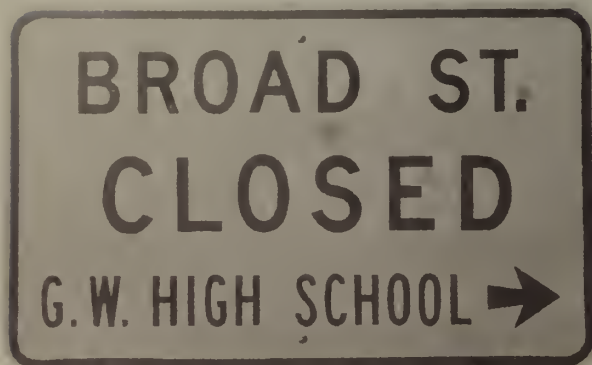

Dominating the scene in Danville, '69, and Danville, '70, was the construction of a multi-million dollar bridge, spanning the Mighty Dan. The monstrous structure, overshadowing GW's very doorstep, made the erection of signs doubly important, especially noticeable to the students.

In the midst of a changing geographical area—a changing campus approach—each almost daily found changing signs directing the avenue for the direct approach to the Broad Street entrance. Truly, signs took on a new significance, a new importance. The student felt a need for looking carefully at them, for following them, in order to reach school on time.

Obviously, building of all kinds is a sign of the times. At this particular stage of life for students, however, "building" takes on new significance.

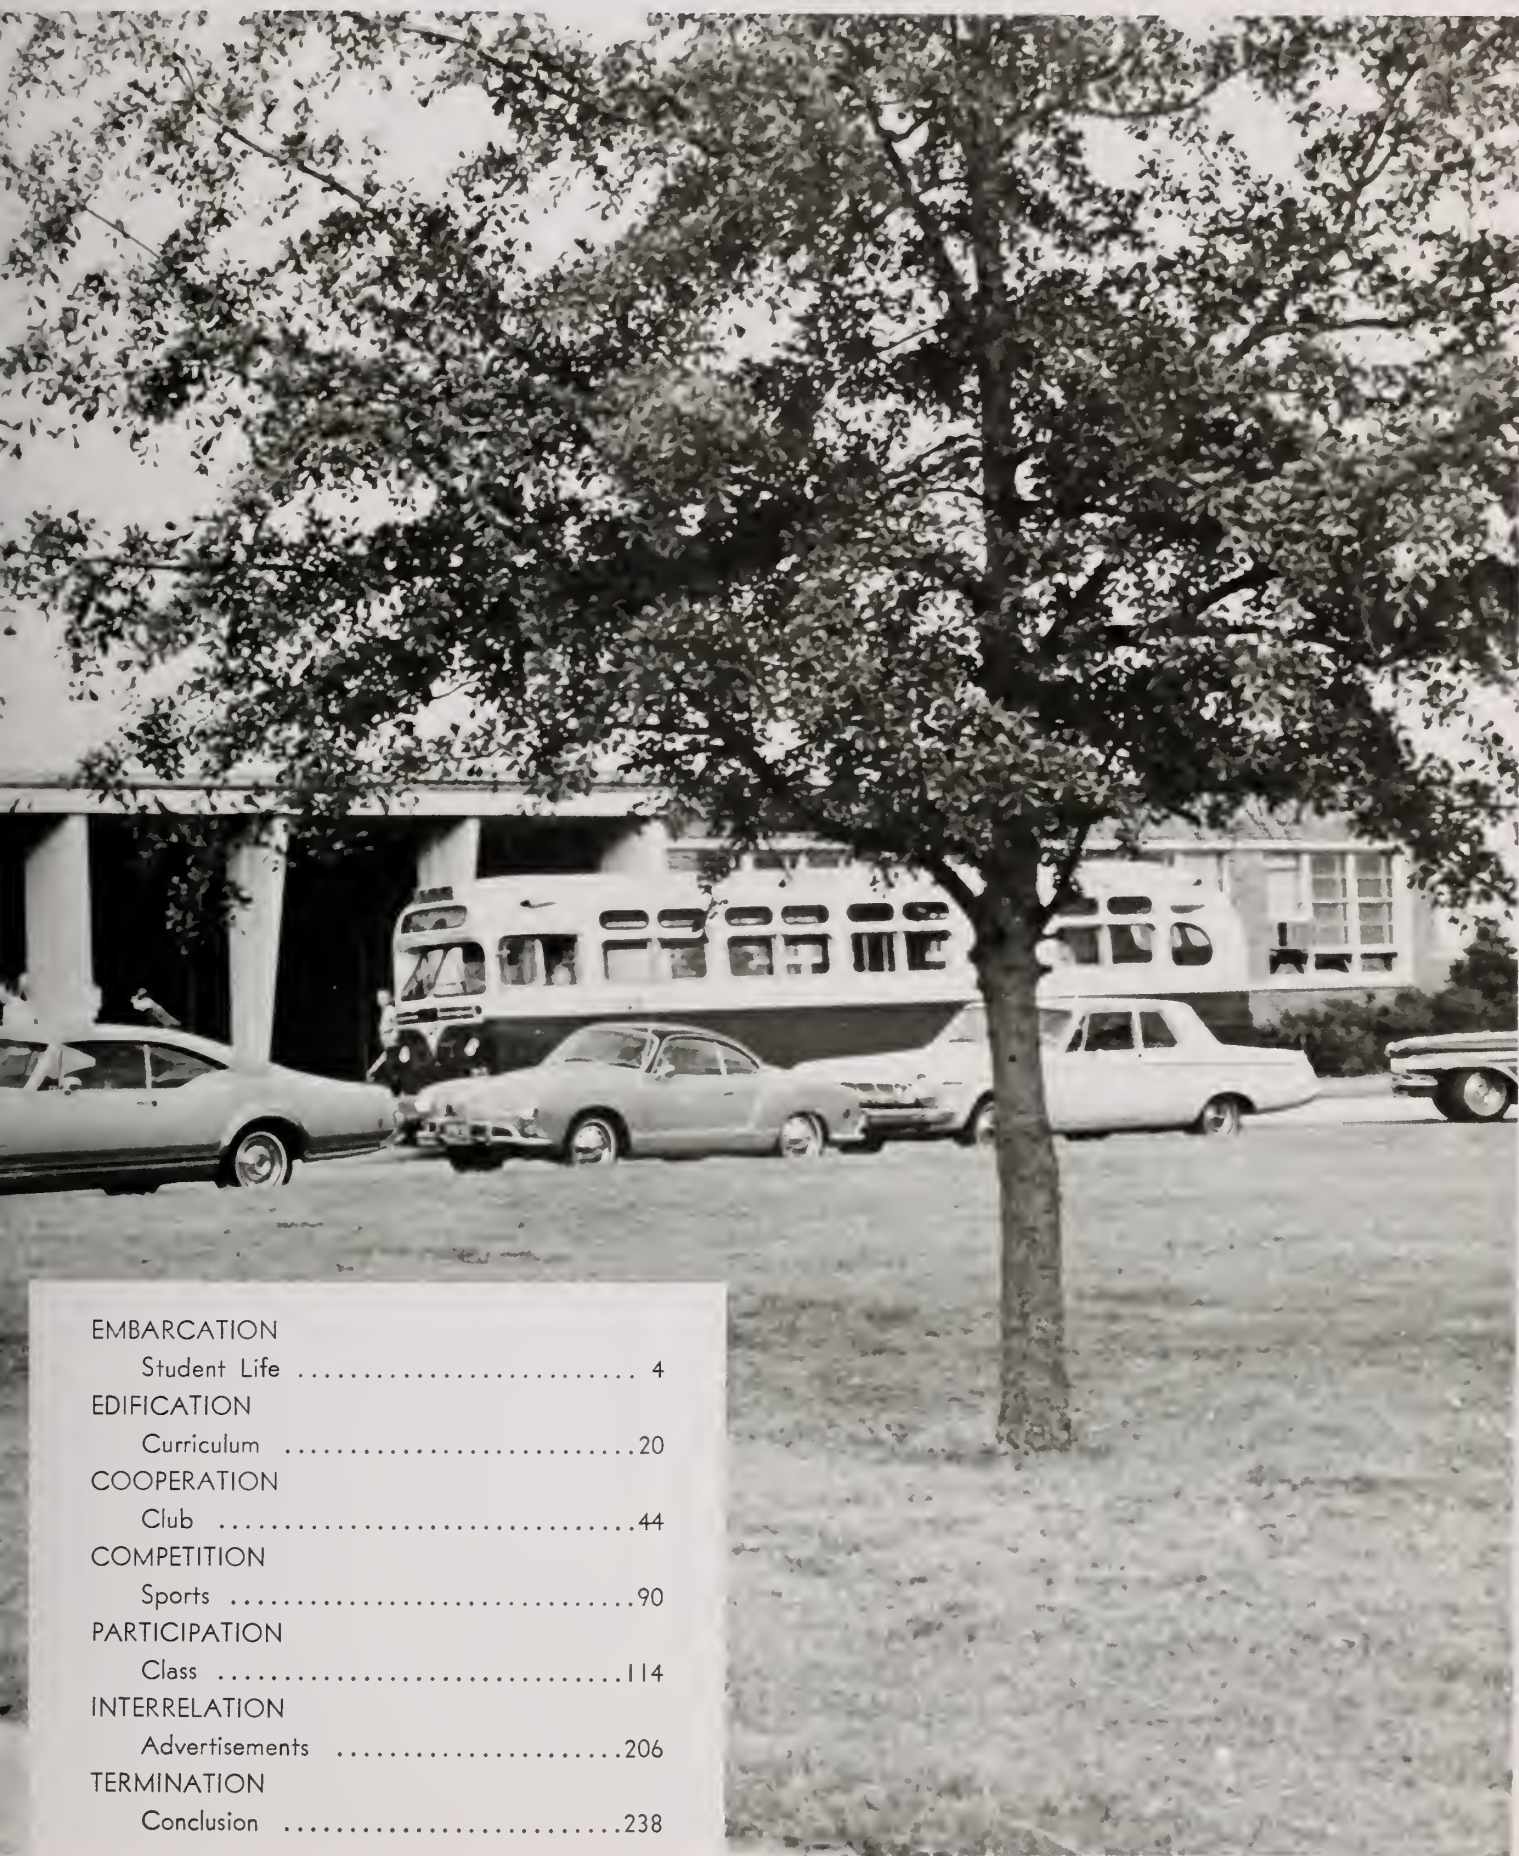

Thus, a natural approach, unifying a glorious '69-'70 year, seems to be relating signs to life at GW. Varied signs, sometimes of an unusual nature, point the way to (or give significance to) characteristic events and experiences of a student's day. The educational pattern lends itself to certain directions ... though the destination is peculiar to each individual student.

Shadows foretell Monday's "blahs."

Miserable Monday Victim

linging to a last minute dream, Monday is ... accidentally sleeping late with only ten minutes before the bus comes ... rushing to finish those last two Algebra problems in homeroom for Miss Hair's first period class ... surviving a biology lecture on earthworms ... dozing off for a fifty-minute nap (during second period) that lasts through the pop quiz ... skipping lunch to finish reading that French assignment (that was assigned last Monday) ... dashing out of the building at 3:20 to catch the bus, (and while on the bus steps realizing that your History book is still in your locker!). All this is Monday. Headaches. Dilemmas. Impossibilities. (There is one good thing about Monday: there will be seven whole days before it's Monday again!)

Miserable Monday

rriving unannounced and uninvited Tuesday is . . . buying a Cardinal ribbon from a Varsity cheerleader with that last dime . . . discovering during morning announcements: "The assembly scheduled for second period is only for students in junior and senior classes" . . . finding the snackline out of banana sandwiches . . . running out of ink during a shorthand dictation . . . breaking the zipper in that new skirt while dressing out for gym . . . receiving report cards that are really not too bad (at least in someone's opinion) . . . running out of gas on the way home from school . . . cheering the basketball team on to victory in the gym (overflowing with students and school spirit). Tuesday in retrospect—one day too late to settle down for a week of studying.

Waning Wednesday

italizing the unaware students, Wednesday is . . . talking during home-room announcements . . . discussing last night's basketball game (instead of the First World War) in history class . . . picking up what looks like Salisbury steak in the lunchline (finding out too late that it is liver in disguise) . . . walking to sixth period with that "special person" (who hasn't yet extended an invitation to the dance next Saturday) . . . visiting the library at 3:20 (instead of landing a choice bus seat) leaving behind a seventy-five-cent fine for not returning a magazine you've never even heard of . . . trying out for spring sports—along with a minor multitude on the sunbleached field. Wednesday always surprises those who fully expect Monday to last forever. (Only two more days!)

"Did you hear the one about . . ."

Thought-provoking Thursday

A

pproaching the end of the week with joy, Thursday is ... watching the rain pour down as student fair tickets are distributed in homeroom ... losing the volleyball game during gym class by one point ... running three laps around the gym (because a certain bum shot lost that volleyball game) ... rushing to finish tonight's math homework during senior lunch ... realizing there is only one more day before the big chance to shatter archival E.C. Glass ... deciding to live dangerously by taking the night off from studies ... watching television (and skimming through the literature assignment during the commercials). Of all the signs characterizing Thursday, the most evident is hope in the faces of students (hope that they can make it through one more day of school!)

eaving tell-tale signs of scholastic "disaster," Friday is ... having five classes and five tests (not a bad average!) ... standing in line for a ticket to the basketball game while the hot-dog gets cold ... cramming for a pop quiz in the sunshine during a welcomed fire drill ... spending sixth period reading Chatterbox while the teacher reads something else (like the strategic history chapter!) out loud to the class ... rushing out of the building at 3:20 (with an irreplaceable feeling of relief) ... racing to catch the chartered bus as it leaves for the away game ... freezing at football games, roasting at basketball games, and cheering heartily until hoarse at both. That's Friday night! Then, at midnight, all GW Cinderellas return home to get a good night's rest. (T.G.I.F.)

Super Saturday

"We all live on a Jesse Gibson bus!"

Inspiring few to work (for remuneration and otherwise) and many to loaf, Saturday is ... sleeping late to recover from Friday night ... waking up to a chorus of "Get out of that bed!" from a zealous parent ... washing the family car (occasionally drowning the neighbor's dog with a spray of water!) ... mowing the lawn (with a mower that had to be salvaged from the Dark Ages) ... "glancing" over a reading assignment while under a hair dryer (and falling asleep while under that relaxing dryer) ... waiting ten minutes for her to finish primping ... spending another night on the big town ... dozing off in the wee hours of Sunday morning, humming in contentment that certain melody. Saturday—the perfect day for lots of fun, relaxation, and a little work.

nding a fun-filled and fruitful week, Sunday is ... reading Dick Tracy to see if he has a new crimestopper tip ... spilling orange juice on that brand new outfit ... hearing the latest gossip (before Sunday School no less!) ... assembling, for once in the week, as a family unit in the church pew ... "sinfully" indulging in a huge Sunday dinner ... thumbing through a parallel reading assignment (on which a five-hundred-word report is due Monday) ... trying not to remember that tomorrow it's "back to school" ... succeeding in getting Father to let you have the car for the afternoon (only to find that the gas is hollering "EMPTY!") ... going to bed at a decent hour (first time in a week!). Restful, relaxing, refreshing Sunday.

esurging with the excitement characterizing a special autumn weekend is the glamour noted in certain weekend events—homecoming at GW! ... cheering each senior Varsity football player before a roaring bonfire Thursday night ... attentively listening to cheerleaders and coaches predict an overwhelming victory in Friday night's big game ... wading through a sea of bodies at halftime to get a choice view of the 1969-70 queen ... vocally approving the football team's second-half play in honor of returning alumni ... spending all day preparing for the night's prom ... dancing in an Eden of crepe and scotch tape which transforms the Cafeteria into a wonderland of fantasy and beauty ... finally returning to a world of reality, regretfully yet willingly.

ATION

Challenging confrontations with the present—and new identifications on the part of the high school student with the great minds of the past! These are the omni-present signs of enrichment in many stimulating classroom experiences. For firm motivation there is the anticipation of that first diploma, symbolizing a student's traditional "duel" with the challenge presented by constantly expanding curriculum-of-learning, participating, cooperating, maturing.

Co-operating With Students,

GWHS came under the guidance of a new chief, Mr. E. L. Motley, in fall, '69. A graduate of GW, Mr. Motley later was listed as a social studies teacher, advancing to head of the Social Studies department at his Alma Mater. After valuable experience as administrator at four other schools, he returned this year as principal of GW.

Included in the 114-member faculty, twenty-seven newcomers began their teaching careers. (Among the new arrivals were several former GWites). Unusual and unexpected experiences, which had not been outlined in college education courses, met many of the teachers, enriching their understanding of today's younger generation.

For the first time, exclusive parking facilities on Broad Street were enjoyed by members of the GW faculty. The auditorium parking lot was reserved, also for the administrative personnel. Special stickers denoted the faculty cars, as did the ever-present sign.

United to meet the new challenges under a new principal, the faculty directed their goals toward helping students find areas in which they might use their talents. A newly-appointed student-faculty committee worked toward mutual satisfaction in solving problems. Ever-present, ever-increasing requirements for college entrance lead the administration and individual faculty members to strive for modern and up-to-date improvements in related curricula.

DISREGARDING THE "NO PARKING" sign, Mr. Guy Yeatts, with his many jobs and responsibilities, is constantly in high gear as assistant principal. Often during the week his voice permeates the halls of GW with constructive comments.

CONCENTRATION IS REQUIRED on the part of Mr. Kenneth Miller, to meet the varied challenges in an assistant principal's day.

Administration Encourages Superb Scholastic Achievements

RELATING THE HISTORY of his new domain to senior David Bartee, principal E. L. Motley points out the cornerstone which has seen fourteen graduating classes since it was laid in 1955.

SCHOOL BOARD in session again! Left to right: Mr. J. R. Denny, Jr.; Mrs. C. J. Schollenbeger; Mr. W. C. Overton, director of instructions; Mr. Ernest Baxa, administrative assistant; Mr. O. T. Bonner, superintendent; Mr. Townes Lea, chairman; Dr. Alden Whitmore, general supervisor; Mr. Earle Garrett; Dr. J. D. Beale and Mr. Leonard Thompson.

WITH A NEW SEMESTER beginning, the anticipated line of students for schedule changes forms in the library. Mr. Guy Yeatts and Mr. E. L. Motley assume roles as counselors.

Square Roots, Rectangles,

EVEN GEOMETRY CAN have pleasurable lectures! Students, when greeted with the bright, cheerful visage of Mrs. Joy Howard, tackle challenging (at times impossible) problems with less apprehension.

HELPFUL COMMENTS FROM an interested teacher lighten the burden of factoring a polynomial expression. Mrs. Marie Gilliam provides the hints. John Bruce wisely puts them to practical use.

WHILE MAKING HIS daily rounds to check the previous night's homework, Mr. John Greeson takes his toll. "Half a loaf" is not quite enough in this instance.

Engage Efforts of Professional Instructors, Math Geniuses

"The square root of the cosine of angle B . . ." is a familiar source of stimulation found in the minds of math students. With the help of fourteen competent and experienced teachers, this mental bewilderment each year falls amazingly into order and develops into useful and necessary mathematical skills for agile minds.

New techniques are always being tried in the Math department in order to increase interest and proficiency. The addition of new books this year, in several classes, provided added incentive for many of the eager math scholars to gain a better understanding of the subject.

Affording an advantage for seniors, the trigonometry included in second-year algebra allowed them to take Math 9 and 10 which is a college level course. This class, known as Fundamentals of Freshman Mathematics, was planned to give valuable advantages in freshman college work. The interest shown in this advanced course grows each year, to the satisfaction of faculty and students.

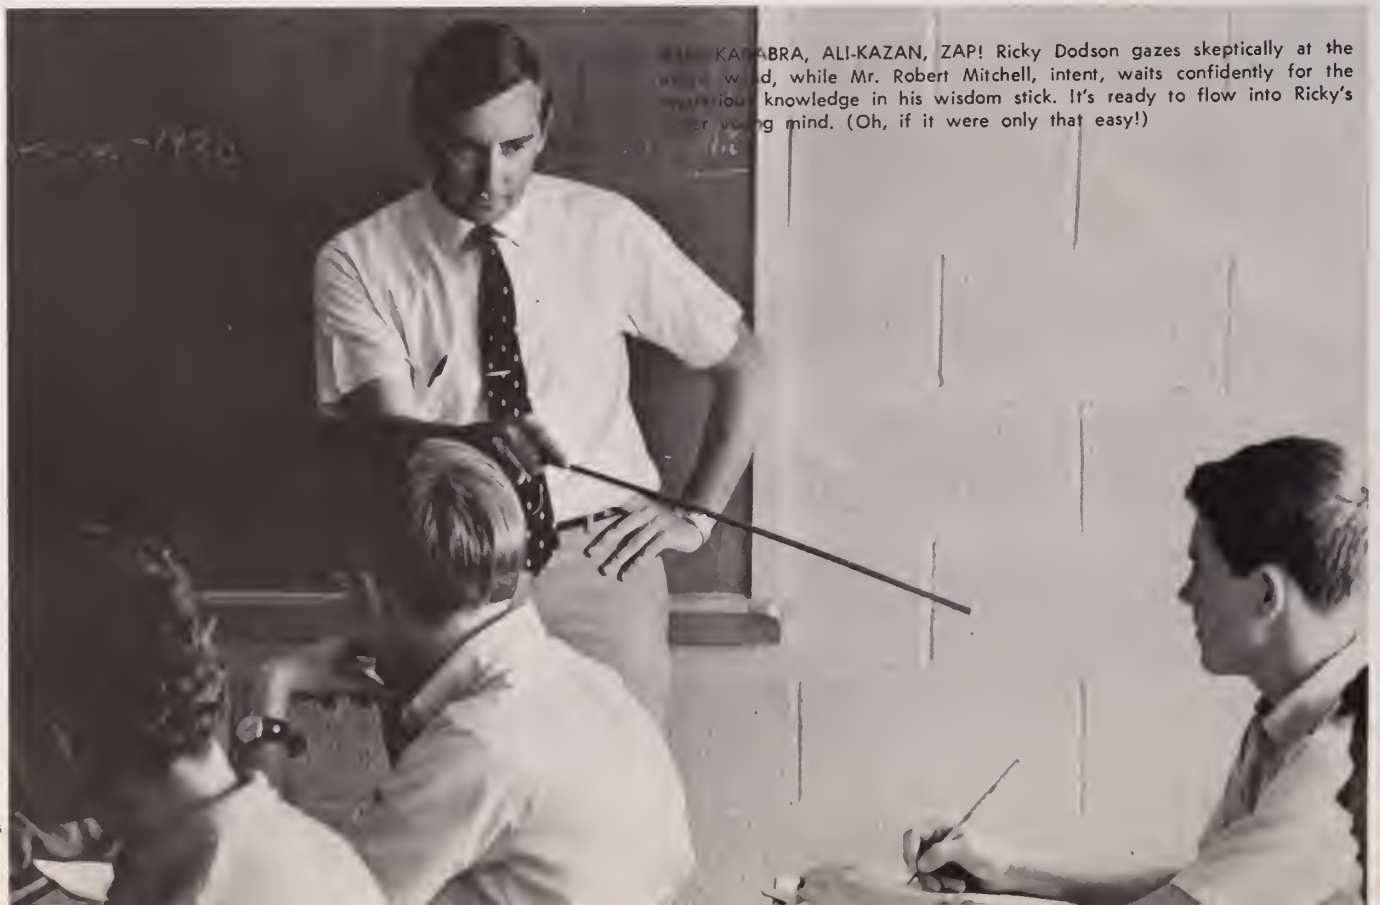

TRIANGLES, SQUARES, RECTANGLES and circles fuse together in the mind of Chris Baker until, with the help of Mr. Earle Hyler, the facts and figures are separated and straightened out.

A JOB WELL DONE is rewarded by a smile for Evangelina Balmori. Bonnie Callahan waits apprehensively for her essay to be examined by a critic (Miss Peggy Moir).

Current Events Debates Enlighten Social Studies — Local

KATABRA, ALI-KAZAN, ZAP! Ricky Dodson gazes skeptically at the word, while Mr. Robert Mitchell, intent, waits confidently for the mysterious knowledge in his wisdom stick. It's ready to flow into Ricky's young mind. (Oh, if it were only that easy!)

BOOKS AND PAPERS completely cover the desk! (Proof that Mr. James Kane does a lot of research?) Tommy Freeze listens attentively as Mr. Kane discusses the outcome of the Civil War and its effect on the South.

ANOTHER TECHNIQUE FOR capturing the interest of students is educational TV. As Mr. Bob Magill adjusts the knobs, a new dimension is added to the Social Studies curriculum.

Issues Become Class Topics

"The chair recognizes the delegate from Argentina." TV at GW? No, just an echo thru the auditorium in the spring, as GW's annual model UN convened for the third consecutive year. George Washington claims distinction as the first in Virginia to sponsor this unique educational program. It now includes participation by six area high schools.

Another activity planned for students thru the Social Studies department was a comprehensive guided tour of the city. Government students again in May boarded buses and visited places which contribute basic services to the community of Danville. After the long and detailed route was completed, the students returned to their classrooms for further discussion, as has been done for the past few years.

Gubernatorial elections sparked debate in the classroom as special reports were presented on the issues and students argued convincingly for their candidates. GWites also joined in discussion over the power bond referendum.

Highlighting their study of the problems of individuals and nations, sociology students visited Stratford to hear Howard Griffith speak on his experiences recorded in his novel Black Like Me. Also sponsored by the department was a television program for junior classes on "Black America."

TAKING TIME OUT from his classroom teaching, Mr. Jesse Gusler supervises the school bookstore and is keeper of the books! Assistance comes from Pat Perkins, a student helper.

Complicated Tenses, Exercises Stump Unsuspecting Pupils

THE LIBRARY PROVIDED resources to the Spanish curriculum for Mr. Larry Mann. Students Ellen Parrish, Marsha Hicks, Angie Gray, Lynn Feldman, Kathy Brown, Marvin Elliot and Keith Mumford find the research interesting.

ANOTHER LATIN TRANSLATION! Katie Townes (who has already completed the assignment) smiles as Mildred Rigney, Steve Samuels, Laura Milam, Mark Moore, Lois Jarrell and Judy Owen face new perils.

Technology and visual aids came to the Latin department—keeping Caesar alive forever! The newest addition to the Latin department was the new overhead projector. Along with the new projector, second-year Latin students experienced a new collection of tapes, maps and film strips.

Stressing oral work, the Foreign Language department aimed for improvement both of the speaking and the writing of the particular language. Tape recordings supplemented the oral work in all advanced Spanish, French and German classes.

Learning from experience was the new technique of teaching for the German classes. Third-year German classes made apfelstrudel to produce a new conception. Not only did the classes taste this German delight, while translating about foods, but also they tried various German cheeses.

AMONG THE NUMEROUS commands familiar to Mrs. Margaret Kushner's German scholars is "Wiederholen Sie, Bitte!" ("Repeat again, please!") This request is especially useful after listening to a taped conversation.

Electric Typing Simplifies Job of Tomorrow's Businessman

Woodpeckers had a hard time competing with the constant barrage of noise which flowed out of the typing rooms in Central. Combined with six other courses, all pertaining to the business world, typing classes filled the halls of GW with the sounds of learning—keys clicking, typewriter bells ringing, cash registers zinging and automatic machines buzzing.

Personal typing, only a semester course, was geared to give the non-business major enough instruction to be able to type for all practical needs in college and afterwards. Numerous courses leading to post-graduate employment were offered.

AS THE YEAR PROGRESSES, Teresa Rankin's hesitant peck, peck is transformed into an onslaught of rapid-fire precision typing. Mrs. Carolyn McCall observes as Teresa triumphantly finishes a three minute timing.

Curriculum Incorporates Ancient, Modern Language Study,

Introduction of a seminar course concerning man in western literature was an innovation in the English department. Emphasizing individual work and seminar sessions, the class of above-average seniors delved into the development of man as an individual and as a member of society. His course was traced through the literature and fine arts of western civilizations. Guest speakers, educational TV, tape recordings, and films were just a few of the aids employed by the instructor, Mrs. Mary Leigh Boisseau.

Juniors received new literature books, part of the same series enjoyed last year by the other English classes. Overhead projectors and additional tape recorders aided teachers in the instruction of literature.

"The Enrichment Series," six educational films of great literary works, was offered by a local theatre to enhance the high school student's study of literature. The first presentation, Macbeth, complemented senior study of Shakespeare's great tragedies. One film each month throughout the winter attracted large crowds of GWites as well as students from other local schools.

WORDS MAY BE important, but not many students find their spelling lessons quite so inspiring as does Carol Martin.

FRENCH IN THE ENGLISH department? Mrs. Mary Leigh Boisseau (above) is just expounding on Victor Hugo's Les Miserables in her seminar novels course, offered to advanced seniors for the first time this year.

GRAMMAR MISTAKES ARE difficult to uncover in an absentee list, but Mr. S. H. Perkinson, head of the English department, and Mrs. Hazel Tennant, a long time member of the department, are challenged (above) to make good use of their wide knowledge to find "just a little one."

Students Enjoy Innovations

TOPIC ON VIEW IS a distinguished art collection from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. Mr. Ray Sale points out many facts of interest to Mr. Crig Fulton, when the Museum brought an exhibit to the GW campus.

PROFESSIONAL WINFIELD PLAYERS (better known around GW as students of Miss Connie Winfield) wrote, produced and presented original plays about Revolutionary America. Angela Wilson and Ronnie Belcher, two of the "stars," perform on their classroom stage. During the first semester creativity was given a free rein in Miss Winfield's advanced junior English class as students captivated their audiences.

HANDPROPPING IS THE ORDER of the day as Mrs. Mary Bacon and students gaze whimsically into the romantic past. They "view" Shakespeare's Medieval lords and ladies dwelling in fantasy castles.

Cooks Master Avocations

Beat in one egg . . . grease completely with butter . . . baste entire seam with red thread . . . only send out invitations after the exact date has been set . . . and bake for approximately thirty minutes at 350°. This standard recipe, prepared in GW's east wing, creates a spicy course more commonly known as Home Economics.

Occupying an array of well-equipped "home-situation" labs, the Home Economics department worked to produce outstanding young women who hope to be successful as future homemakers. At regular intervals either aromatic scents or shrieking voices (from needle-stuck fingers) penetrated the halls. Homemakers were well-rehearsed in the fundamentals of emergency first aid as well, and the work went on!

Being enrolled in a homemaker's course proved to be a springboard for statewide competition. As an example, Kathy Gilbert brought recognition to GW when she won an award for excellence in home electromation.

CLOTH, THE ESSENTIAL material for sewing, passes through many machines before it is sent to merchants for public use. Miss Brenda Atkins explicates the procedure to her sewing class.

Pin plus pattern produces product!

MUCH CONSULTATION BETWEEN teacher (Mrs. Annie Laurie Sayers) and student (Rhonda Yarbrough) must occur before a luscious banquet can appear. After adding such tempting delicacies as Lady Fingers and coconut-covered fondant balls, the menu will be a complete one.

Machinists, Equipment Unite

Among the "first" credited to GW is the fact that this department affords education and planning for the only on-the-job training program available in a high school east of the Mississippi River. This section of the GW community afforded pre-professional courses geared to prepare its students for the world which waits anxiously for well-skilled graduation in this field.

"Best equipped drafting department east of the Mississippi," was the well-substantiated boast of the Industrial Arts department. Laboring to complete the installation of special new equipment by the fall, the department was able to introduce to its students a "wonderful world" of modernized aids.

MECHANICAL DRAWING REQUIRES concentration and diligent work. Involved in perfecting his house plan, Dicky Giles adds last minute details before seeking Mr. George Hunt's nod of approval.

BEGINNING A DETAILED explanation of the technique of testing the resistance of a circuit, Mr. Robert Willoughby demonstrates the procedure to Steve Gambrell, Bobby Pulley, and Richard Crane.

Classical, Pop, Abstract Art Forms Evoke GW's Prodigies

Imagination—that's the quality combined with talent, well-justified teaching staff, and extensive, expensive equipment, making for success in GW's vast Fine Arts department. Encompassing courses on sculpture and drama, as well as chorus and band, the department was the center of sparkling entertainment and challenging creativity for the entire student body.

Providing colorful outlets for a variety of campus talent, drama classes continued to train actors, actresses, stage hands and drama enthusiasts.

Displays in the east wing bespoke GWites' artistic ability. The detail and overall perfection of the various paintings and sculptures reflected the hard work and dedication of students and their teachers.

Rhythm and melody were the key words for band and chorus students. Following an active season as performers at game halftimes, the marching band moved indoors and practiced as the concert and training bands. Innovations were introduced by director Harry Mamlin, who trained all summer for special study in conducting.

Joining the band to make beautiful music were the chorus groups. These included Girls, Mixed Chorus and Concert Choir.

WITH A LOOK OF friendly concern etched on his face, Mr. Harry Mamlin listens intently for timing and correct notes. Hoping to achieve the satisfaction of an "A," Allen Rippe reaches for one of those high notes.

CHORUS HAS NO "FIRST chair" like band! This fact is illustrated by the photographer who caught the harmonizing chorus members: Glen Jackson, Mike Comer, Marsha Tuck, Lois Talbott, Pat Warner, Debra Mimms.

"CORRECT PAPER SIZE is essential to any painting," points out Miss Lucile Walton to art student Wayne Carey, while she (chops off her thumb?) demonstrates the use of a paper cutter.

DANVILLE FINE ARTS students view oriental art when the Virginia Museum Artmobile makes its regular visit to GW. Ray Sales of the museum staff shows the treasures to Linda Tuck and Rhonda Dalton.

DELICATE CHISELLING STROKES shape the rough form of clay into an attractive vase. The ceramics class enables students such as Vickie Hardy to use their imagination in creating knick-knacks.

Diverse, Up-to-Date Programs Bring Scientific Knowledge

From the world of feathered bipeds to the realms of acid-base titrations, to the halls of curvilinear motion, the Science department was a department with variety. Directed reading and research provided the knowledge students sought in the south and west wings.

Atoms and acids, refrigerators and resistors—these were objects of study in freshman science, prelude to more specific advanced courses offered by the department. Biology labs were accompanied by the usual efforts of amateur artists, as student technicians tried to draw on paper what they saw on their trays.

Electron love, polymerization and other adult-world terms sparked chemistry students. They explored the world of atoms in regular and "Chem Study" classes.

CHEMISTRY TEACHERS PERFORM many duties, including experimentation and grading. Mr. Rodger Bailey, totally confident about his experiment, enjoys creativity before tackling all those multitudinous lab books.

GW'S VISUAL AIDS add variety, broaden understanding in class procedures. Kathy Harris might have been less queasy, however, had Mrs. Phyllis Brown not shown her those "cute" worms.

HYPNOTIZED BY THE undulating pendulum, Mr. Charles Stephenson's experimenting students (Peyton Mahaffy, Eugene Worley and Nelson Turner) find the Quantitative Physical Science course a real challenge.

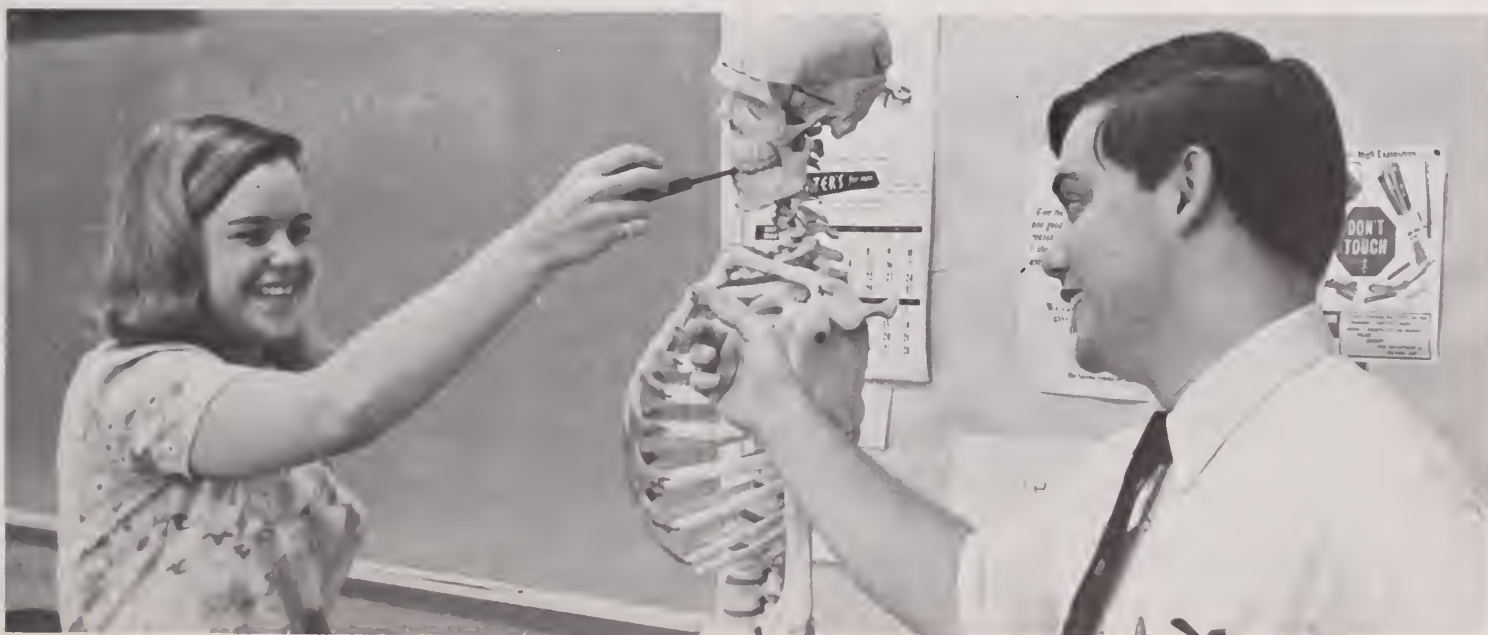

UNDERSTANDING THE METRIC system is the concern of Mrs. Johnnie Fullerwinder. She instructs her science class in the intricacies involved, as science and math unite to solve a problem.

BAFFLING MYSTERIES UNFOLD as Mr. John Fesperman lectures to his chemistry class.

ARE THE LONG RANGE effects of smoking hereditary or environmental? Could continuous chain smoking cause a decrease in the number of chromosomes or in skin composition, color or texture? A Biology teacher,

Mr. Bill McKinney warns Judy Johnson of the disastrous outcome of smoking. A pipe-smoking friend, who suffered the consequences of his unbroken habit, proves his point!

Exhilarating Activities Strengthen Adolescent Minds, Bodies

PE STUDENTS develop good physical endurance and muscle tone while running track. Two seemingly "day-blind" tracksters invent a more difficult feat by running the course backwards.

"Put her in reverse" . . . "blow your horn" . . . "slow down" . . . rather frantic suggestions of driver training teachers. Easing worries somewhat was the addition of a driving range built last summer on the school campus. Including a stop light, railroad tracks, and parking spaces, this new facility presents a genuine facsimile of the actual driving environment—minus the heavy imposing traffic.

Two years of physical training promoted mental alertness and better physical readiness for facing a competitive world. The PE department provided a variety of group and individual sports, including tennis, volleyball, and trampoline.

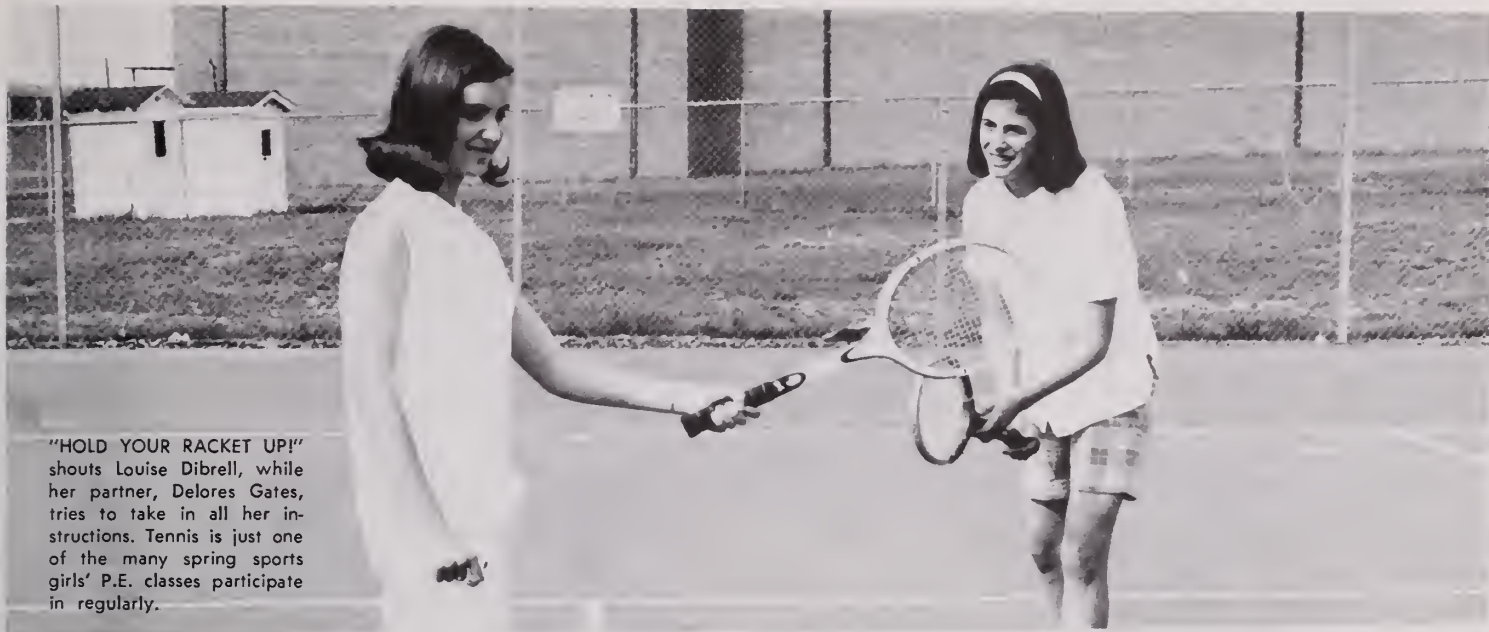

At the beginning and end of each year, students are required to participate in physical fitness tests. These tests serve to develop as well as to determine physical potential.

In regular classrooms, freshman study centered around the marvels of the human body. Sophomores learned the principles of first aid, as well as good health habits. At the year's end, students who successfully completed the routine test were awarded first aid cards by the local Red Cross chapter. Thus they were authorized to practice emergency first aid.

"I CAN'T HEAR YOU!" roars Coach John Watlington (below) as he calls the class roll and makes a last minute inspection before beginning the activities of the day.

"HOLD YOUR RACKET UP!" shouts Louise Dibrell, while her partner, Delores Gates, tries to take in all her instructions. Tennis is just one of the many spring sports girls' P.E. classes participate in regularly.

ONE MAJOR LESSON learned in girls' Phys. Ed. is clearly illustrated. Victory is oftentimes rewarded. Yet, in defeat, losers of this volleyball match prepare to do muscle-hardening sit-ups!

Action Takes Places Between Classes; Personnel Perform

Five days a week for thirty-six weeks to accommodate more than 2300 students—this added to over 432,000 meals prepared by the cafeteria staff during the past year. After fifth period each day, the custodians had the monstrous job of cleaning up after the army of hungry eaters.

As each week-day noon hour approached, and GWites took a needed break from classes, the faithful cafeteria and maintenance employees encountered their busiest time of the day. Striving to keep the steady stream of grumbling stomachs satisfied could have been a "Mission: Impossible" for the cafeteria personnel. Yet every Monday through Friday they accomplished this spectacular feat!

Before the students' arrival in September, and in June after their departure, the custodial staff remained constantly busy. Coping with students challenged!

HAS TYPING CLASS been moved to the main office? Mrs. Inez Anderson nods her head in approval as Mrs. Celia Dishman expertly portrays the role of the dedicated student.

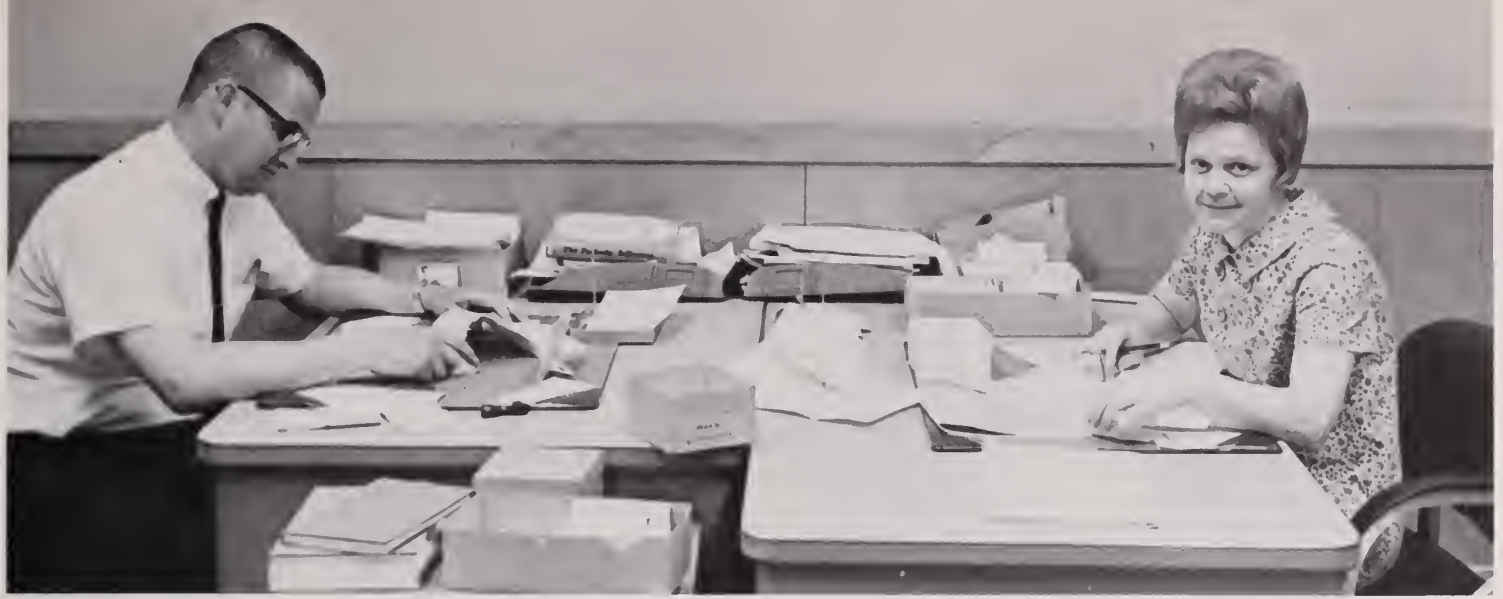

CUSTODIANS OFTENTIMES FIND that their duties vary from their usual maintenance job. Mr. Lloyd Gravett interrupts the unpacking of new book-rental supplies for a quick picture.

GW'S VERY OWN "Candid Camera" catches Janet McGregor and Suzanne Crowder smiling contently after completing a satisfying meal. Although they may hear varied comments about cafeteria menus, it is the popular opinion that food, any food, and good companionship is more than welcome when noon rolls around. Nonetheless, Gail Robertson seems a bit suspicious of the whole operation.

CHECKING OUT BOOKS is not the only duty of librarians, Mr. Vincent Oglesby and Mrs. Dolly Thompson. Office work also plays a major part in the day of this busy staff.

Librarians Preside, Aid Students in Courses of Instruction

INTENT EXPRESSIONS REFLECT hard work as Miss Elizabeth Copeland and Mrs. Virginia Fentress delve through cards and folders trying to find some lost "sheep"—one of their many office duties.

Books, books and more books—over 18,000! Where else could a student find such an abundance of useful and relaxing reading matter except in the library?

Everchanging, the library was never lacking in information and fictional texts. Librarians kept up-to-date popular magazines, newspapers and reference books. GWites discovered the past, present, and future of the world about them, when they took time out from their active schedules to visit the calm and tranquil atmosphere of the library.

"May I help you?" was the familiar chant of industrious office secretaries as they went about their daily office routines. Heading the co-workers, Miss Elizabeth Copeland presided as office director and personal secretary to principal E. L. Motley.

In addition to their many regular tasks, the secretaries busied themselves with the completion of college recommendations and transcripts of high school records, computations of student averages!

CAUGHT IN THE act? Dreaming of leaving school early for a weekend fishing trip, Mr. Joe Ferrell inspects a truck while sporting his most innocent-looking smile.

DE, ICT, VOT Rehearse Industrious Trainees for Future

Providing on-the-job training and obtaining an education, simultaneously, enabled DE, ICT and VOT students to prepare themselves for the years preceding graduation. Whether a job or college looms in the future, students active in this area found courses and experiences designed to prepare them to meet the world half-way.

Under the direction of Coach Alger Pugh, Industrial Cooperative Training students attended classes in the morning and left school early for their respective jobs. Students were placed at jobs in their particular field of interest through the cooperation of Danville businesses.

Part-time office training was the key note for VOT. Tackling classes such as Bookkeeping and Business Math kept students busy. The department also prepared more than twenty students for post-graduation careers.

The Distributive Education program, under the direction of Mr. O. C. Britton, arranged opportunities for students to prepare themselves for future vocations, while still learning at the high school level. Special Christmas sales training sessions made available for the student body information valuable in salesmanship.

WHILE ADMIRING ONE of the many posters which adorn the DE classroom, Bonnie Brim listens as Coach Alger Pugh explicates the aspects of the abstract coloring in this modern painting.

POSTERS AND PROPS are an important part of any sales campaign. Mr. O. C. Britton reviews one such display used by DE students to promote the sales of baby shoes.

Schedules, College Guide Students to Advice of Counselors

Sound of hammers in the Guidance department? Indeed! The addition of new offices for the counselors.

An additional service of the highly trained staff was the offering of summer conferences to rising seniors for a discussion of college preferences and possible post-graduate work. The counselors also scheduled college conferences with many college representatives through the year for interested upperclassmen.

Of prime importance to guidance counselors was the administering of various tests, keeping a cumulative file on each student for reference. These files were also valuable to Danville agencies and businesses, whenever additional information could be of benefit to the students.

PATIENCE, INTEREST, AND wisdom are of great importance as Mrs. Audrey Grinstead makes one of the many schedule changes needed at the beginning of each semester to fit students in desired curricula.

PLANS FOR THE next four years are the subject of worry and anticipation for many seniors. Kathy Gilbert is no exception, as she seeks the advice of Mrs. Ethel Barker.

GUIDANCE COUNSELING EXTENDS not only to the student but also to his family in line with current trends. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Dunbeck and their son, Peter, listen attentively as Mr. Ivey Rogers outlines the freshman curriculum.

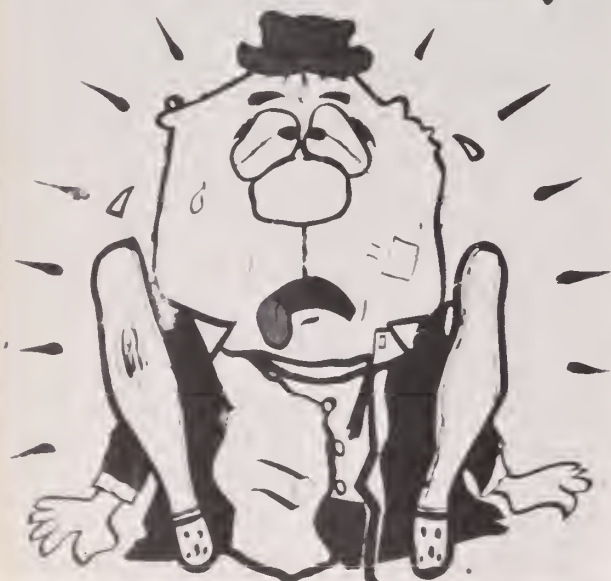

REASSURANCE AND CONFIDENT smiles beam from George Washington guidance counselor Mrs. Betty Falk. The typical qualities always found in the Guidance department help to maintain the high standards of GW.

DON'T

RATION

Avoid the drudgery of detail and dues. G/W clubs merge a sign of student participation and group achievement. Through cooperation, club members encounter the great contentment of soaring with others and the fascinating exhilaration of creating and setting into motion a unique project. Yet above all, the most important aspect of any club meeting is the chance for humans to feel the warmth of a friendship when the school day grows long.

ONE OF THE MANY talents of a CAVALIER staff member is mastering the use of the scaleograph. This concoction is valuable for expert cropping in effectively placing the hundreds of pictures used. Exercising this talent are Bill Booker (layout), Steve Gambrell (sports-editorial) and Gloria Francisco (technical copy).

COMBINED EFFORTS OF THE Class of '70, help make the CAVALIER a "number one" book. Irvin Richardson (photography) gaily smiles at the photographer while Alan Obye (sports-layout) smiles indulgently. Other aspects of CAVALIER life include meeting the challenge as Libby Rudder (literary) and Elizabeth Fuller (club) sort those prized pictures. Meanwhile, a little change of scene gives Carol Martin (faculty) and Olivia Young (director of typists) opportunity in collecting more facts.

BRIGHT GRINS AND enthusiastic remarks are characteristic of the many accomplishments of CAVALIER editors Sandra Dillon (composition), Sherry Watlington (caption), Joan Moore (feature) and Carolyn Clark (activities)!

Although a busy year has passed, there is still a sense of excitement as to the arrival of the 1970 CAVALIER. Being editors, a cheerful attitude is certainly shown as these girls review a year of hard but rewarding work.

Yearbook Sweeps National, State, Regional Press Awards

Combine many different skills with enthusiastic, conscientious effort. This accounts for a CAVALIER which is always a real winner! When results were announced in highly competitive yearbook circles, CAVALIER '69 was a sweepstakes winner.

In national rating, for the second consecutive year the Medalist award was received from Columbia Scholastic Press Association. In regional rating, the trophy for best yearbook (in Class A schools) in the Southeast came to GW. In statewide rating, the plaque for "best yearbook in Class 1-A schools" was awarded the CAVALIER.

Goaded by the desire for excellence, the editorial staff kept an "ear to the ground" to reflect student interest. Under the direction of Mrs. Cheney Lea, adviser, the editors studied new journalism trends to make CAVALIER '70 a reflection of the thinking of the times.

Countless hundreds of hours of typing, planning, cropping pictures, writing, rewriting, and editing! Endless trips to the office for names, to club sponsors for additional ideas, to department heads for new facts! This is the life of a worker in E-102—the CAVALIER room.

JUST A MOMENT to spare a smile for a CAVALIER picture and then back to work! Janice Hagood (headlines) waits to write down any important information or catchy ideas for headline creating that Terri Burrell (senior statistics), has to contribute. There's pen in hand ready for work.

LIKE FINDING A NEEDLE in a haystack! How on earth can you find one student's name in such a vast collection of cards? Illustrating the simplicity and ease of finding the name, index editor, Vickie Sigmon quickly checks the "it." Judy Motley (class), Ann Pritchett (campus-life), and Bobby Jones (sports-pictorial) admire her acumen!

CAVALIER EDITORS ACTUALLY are able to find some spare time in their busy schedules to help their fellow staff members with their problems, (But, of course, they can't "waste"! ) Laura Southard (projects) dictates a letter to Carol Martin (faculty) (seated), while Sherry McKinney (technical) and Pat Beaver (copy), (seated) check her grammar, diction and form by the "BOOK."

CONTEMPLATING RETIREMENT AFTER an eventful and successful (so many awards for CAVALIER!) sixteen years as a CAVALIER advisor, Miss Josephine Estes relates for staff photographer, Mr. W. F. Cuddington, highlights and pleasurable memories. There were the days at "old" GW when a staff of twelve students worked before, after and during school hours to put out a book with a little over a hundred pages. And then, there are today the joys of working with young people in a non-credit journalism class who "are so, so much on the ball."

Students Finance Yearbook; Ads Provide Extra Touch

Click, clack, click—the adding machine in the CAVALIER room recorded those ever-mounting figures, tangible evidence of business staff industriousness. The CAVALIER business staff, with its usual successful campaign, continued to afford a top-notch book to the student body at “pre-inflation” prices.

The staff, instructed by Miss Josephine Estes, worked on several projects through the year to finance the yearbook. While most students were still enjoying their summer vacations, the business staff was busy selling and writing advertisements, their main concern.

After school officially began, there was the subscription campaign to be planned. Sale of class pictures was a major source of income. Added revenue came from the sale of yearbook covers and from orders of personal cards for Seniors.

In addition to money-making schemes, business staffers planned and drew up the ad section. Reward for a job well-done was realized with the final subscription count. Out of some 1800 books, the CAVALIER files were left with less than ten copies of the '69 edition.

BUSINESS STAFF MEMBERS (Jeanette Love, business manager, Kirk Bidgood, advertising manager, Betsy Motley, Carol Alderson, Grady Love, Pattie Parham, Pam Davis and Len Davis) check the funds! Under the watchful eye of advisor Miss Josephine Estes, another day's work is completed as the books are finally balanced! With a job well done could come a coveted “day off”!

Journalists Consolidate Diligence, Aptitudes for Publication

IN ORDER TO make the Chatterbox appealing, Martha Corbin, Marty Haynesworth, Lisa Dixon, Donna Hundley, Debbie Farlow, Bruce Williams, John Baxa, and Richard Berkley, pose as photographers, artists, and mock-up masters.

INSTRUCTION ON LAYOUT technicalities gives Judy Hughes the opportunity to explain to Paula Cleveland, Lee Lewis, Debra Hardy and Nancy Jackson

Searching for new, fresh ways to present the news of GW, the '70 Chatterbox staff biweekly published a newspaper which constantly was listed as an award winner. The climax of activity at the printer's on Tuesdays brought information and entertainment to the school on Fridays. Every event in the constant GW panorama was covered extensively and accurately by the student press.

A unique style was introduced this year when the columnists included small individual pictures within the body of their articles. Also adding interest in the paper were the use of numerous cartoons drawn by talented staff members and the various personality features on the students and teachers.

COMPOSING THE ONLY all-male portion of the Chatterbox staff, sports writers Ed Hankins, Joe Dunbeck, Dave Gayk, Billy Hall, and Roy Hodge thrust their masculine ingenuity into action.

the importance of attractive advertisements. With advertisements like these, they could sell the Dan River.

INTELLIGENCE, IMAGINATION AND AMBITION characterize Chatterbox columnists. Mike Koplen, Jan Carter, Raymond Ruocco, John Champion, Lisa Matney, Rosemary Stilwell and Bruce Spangler combine their efforts in producing alive and up-to-date information for student reading pleasure.

RUMMAGING THROUGH OLD Chatterboxes, Lynne Motley, Evelyn Bakas and Keith Silverman find discontinued journalism practices. Mrs. Jacqueline Beeler, advisor, points out principles.

PEP TALKS ARE on the agenda! Joining the ranks of Donnie Parrish, Hal Colisch, Dewitt Howard and Tommy Wimmer, Frances Hutcherson (below) predicts (with accurate feminine intuition) a large subscription campaign.

AFFORDING THE LATEST scuttlebutt, the bulletin board entrances Terry Talbott and Karen Johns. Staff members wait their turn to look and laugh—Steve Long, Denise Smith, Rae Ann Williams, Gloria Jordan, Michael Stanfield and Stilson Land.

PREVIOUS ISSUES of CTS entertain the "inner core" of the 1969-70 staff. Robyn Harvey, business manager, shows her approval of the humorous

COLOR BOOK HOURS?
(No, not kindergarten students!) Wayne Carey, Kenny Powell, Debbie Harr and Debby Haynes enjoy their favorite time of the day, preparing a CTS production.

GW Creativity Yields Array of Abstract, Traditional Ideas

Once again the Cardinal Talent Scout exhibited its trademark of excellence in winter and spring issues. This year the biannual literary display was composed of unusually varied subject matter, ranging from serious short stories to lyrical poems.

The staff sifted through mountains of entries, from which were selected the best and most artistic compositions. Under the guidance of Miss Betty Lou Giles, the small but dedicated group of literary buffs compiled CTS '70. New issues were created by combining staff contributions with writings of other talented GWites.

Experimenting with new journalistic ideas has been the custom of the CTS. Its individuality makes Cardinal Talent Scout a leader in its field. Constantly striving for the achievement of high journalistic standards, "master-minds" behind the issues of this year's CTS stimulated the interest of the student body, as evidenced by the subscription list.

BUSY WITH AN eye to the next edition of the biannual CTS, juniors Wanda Dove, Sidney Burris and Bonnie Callahan work for the right word.

BUSINESS STAFF sings merits of CTS. Julia Hayden types a catchy tune for Patti Payne, Don Whittaker, Teresa Rankin.

DISCOVERY OF ANOTHER creative piece of art for the CTS brings a happy smile from Miss Betty Lou Giles, advisor.

DEDICATION AND PERCEPTION are key words describing two great leaders! SCA president, Steve Echols, emulates GW's namesake, George Washington.

IT MAY BE the hard way, but SCA secretary, Leigh Updike, hunts and pecks, hunts and pecks, for a job well done.

Campaigns, Elections Spark Year for Student Government

Hark ye!—Vivacious campaign speeches, the clicks of voting machines, coins jingling in collection boxes and the smothered thuds of cans dropping into a gala of decorated containers! These marked the excitement and hustle-bustle of another SCA year.

"I promise, if elected . . ." Election of officers of the Student Cooperative Association provided a highlight to the school year, and spring '69 was no exception. Candidates came to no end of new ideas as they planned to promote their campaigns.

Hard work and co-operation were the keys to all SCA projects. The sounds of "Jingle Bells" and other Christmas songs symbolized the beginning of the winter project. Dozens of unusually well-decorated boxes full of canned foods, were collected from each homeroom and delivered to the Faith Home. Selling student directories was one of the more productive activities. Such undertakings furnished money to send delegates to district and state meetings in cities throughout the state.

Along with other responsibilities, the SCA was in charge of weekly devotions. This was one of the activities directed by the vice-president, leaving the president free to concentrate on planning.

MONEY-MAD SCA treasurer, Pete Gantsoudes, diligently searches for the secret hiding place where the big bills are kept.

READY TO GIVE the morning devotions, SCA vice-president, Ed Pratt, chooses a selection to suit the mood of the day.

SCA ELECTION DAY finds Beverly Shelton and Terri Burrell (left) reporting to GW's voting precincts. (That's Irvin Richardson "sneaking" in!) Students report name and homeroom to '69 SCA president, Jackie Fitts. Instructions concerning the operation of the voting machines is the order of the day. Officials check the names of Keith Silverman and Ronald Belcher. Cynthia Berkley throws the switch for Clay Pearson's vote (right).

HAPPY SMILES ARE in order after a successful campaign week. Newly elected SCA officers (Ed Pratt, Steve Echols, Leigh Updike, and Pete Gantsoudes) "do their thing" by taking down campaign slogans.

"LET'S HAVE THAT AGAIN," pleads a confused Pattie Cook as Libby Hodges approaches (left). Frannie Carter has captured an eager voter, whose stance suggests his preoccupation with the task at hand. Open curtain reveals Sandra Guill well-satisfied with her vote. Irvin and Terri (right) return to class knowing they've voted for the winning ticket. (This time Irvin isn't "sneaking," but confident that he's mastered the machine.

Students View Majestic French Palaces Via Talks, Films

Whether singing carols or viewing plays, members of the French Club enjoyed the language. They visited the magnificent palaces of France via talks and films during club meetings, making the romantic language "come alive."

Early in November several of the members began preparations for a play to be given completely in French.

Members observed the French holiday customs at their December meeting. Students shared information on "Pere Noel" and discussed French Christmas festivities. Familiar Christmas carols with French lyrics were a frequent sound in all French classes and at the Christmas club meeting.

Proposed as the main project for the spring was the heralding of "French Day," during which members attempted to give the school a European atmosphere. Plans provided for all French students to wear French apparel. Halls were decorated with French signs. French club sponsor, Mr. Lawrence Wilburn, also planned a special trip to Randolph-Macon Woman's College for a French play.

WITH LEADERSHIP QUALITIES exemplified by president Greg Stafford, the French Club officers (treasurer, Lynn Motley, secretary, Nancy Lea, and vice-president, Susan Lucki) diligently plan the program for a future meeting. French pastries, perhaps?

Films, Guests, Apfelstrudel Highlight Special Club Meetings

Visions of Apfelstrudel and Pumpe-nickel danced in the heads of German Club members as an innovation was adopted for regular meetings. Refreshments with a foreign flair, instead of cokes and chips, were prepared for monthly meetings by an energetic committee.

German pastries, breads, beverages and candies became routine delicacies. Meeting on the first Wednesday of every six weeks period, the language club studied problems inherent in the rebuilding of a war-torn nation.

Modern Germany, with its advantages and disadvantages, was the concern of club members. Solutions to the prevalent issues were debated. By watching films on German society and government, in listening to guest lecturers from the American Tobacco Company, and thru discussions of experiences of local students, who have recently visited the Germanic countries, the members came to a better understanding of other lands and people.

GERMAN CLUB OFFICERS John Champion, president, Sandra Dillon, secretary, Alan Obye, treasurer, and Wayne Jones, vice-president, blend a study of geography along with perfection of the language.

Modern Day Romans Vigorously Attack Caesar's Problems

CLAD IN TYPICAL Roman dress, Latin club members, Ann Pritchett (sec.), and Leigh Updike (treas.), instruct Robert Bridgforth (v-pres.), in the unique art of tying and draping the toga.

Two years of intense Latin study finally reaped its rewards as third year scholars joined the privileged ranks of members of the Latin Club. These modern day Romans tackled the problems of Caesar and Antony with renewed vigor.

Utilizing his dramatic talents, Mr. Warren Fulton, sponsor of the club, immediately enlisted the aid of his students in producing a pseudo-Greek comedy, The Moths. Presented at the first regular meeting, the comedy inaugurated an active year for GW's twentieth century Romans.

"The Ruins of Pompei," a film supplied by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, was one of the many topics discussed at the monthly club meetings. A Roman Christmas was observed at the annual club party. Highlighting one spring gathering was a lecture presented by Dr. G. Thompson of Hampden-Sydney College.

The advent of spring brought with it the traditional Latin Banquet. Weeks of preparation culminated with the successful productions of chariot races, Roman games, and lavish foods. Togas were the latest style for that spring evening when second year Latin students served the "great scholars" as amiable and energetic servants.

Serving to enhance the study of works of ancient Latin writers, this language club afforded variety to juniors and seniors who daily translate in the classics.

"Navidad, Navidad." Musical incantations reverberated throughout the halls of GW and the streets of Beverstone as the Spanish club endeavored to extend Yuletide greetings to the residents of Danville. Caroling was the newest item on the Spanish agenda.

Social occasions were planned with Spanish residents of Danville. Various films and slides provided variety to the clubs programs held in S105.

Working for publication of a Spanish newspaper and presenting original skits in Spanish gained new experience in pronunciation and grammar, as well as entertainment, for the members. The year's result? Fun and facts!

Fitness Helps Girl Athletes Excel in Indoor-Outdoor Sports

Sports and outdoor life are for girls too, and the Girls' Athletic Association proved it. Volleyball contests were the first of the fall sports in which the members participated. Tennis followed next and basketball competition topped off the roster of winter sports.

After the semester break, the girls returned ready to launch into spring events. As hockey experts, the girls marched onto the field dressed in protective gear from head to toe. Trampolines, side horses, parallel bars, pyramids, headstands—these provided enjoyment for double jointed girls and challenges for those not so lucky. Next the GW athletic fields became softball territory as the sport fans ended their busy agenda. At the athletic awards assembly in May, those members who earned the required number of points for participation received pins of emblems as recognition.

GIRLS' PHYSICAL EDUCATION classes fight icy winds, cloudy skies, and high fly balls to display their softball skills. The umpire plays it safe and wears a little cool-weather protection.

Membership Mounts by Earning of Letter in Varsity Sport

Determination, hard work, and dexterity supplemented the athletic abilities of the 69-70 Monogram Club. Membership consisted of those athletes who earned a varsity letter in one of the various sports programs during the year.

Club participants sold programs before home football and basketball games. Also added to the agenda were senior projects such as aiding in the clean-up of J. T. Christopher Stadium after games.

The GW Muscle Men played key roles in Homecoming Weekend activities. Working jointly with the cheerleaders, the Monogram Club sponsored the Homecoming dance. They had the honor of selecting contestants and their vote designated the Homecoming Queen.

PROUD TO DISPLAY the team's football schedule, Monogram Club president Ed Pratt and sec.-treas. Gary Heady convinces v-pres. Steve Smoral, an avid basketball enthusiast, his effort is for a worthy cause.

Interclub Roundball Competition Emphasizes Sportsmanship

Aches, sprains and bruises were often the order of the day for an active member of GW's five Hi-Y's. Members of these clubs contributed unselfishly of their time and effort to improve their particular club, and planned a competitive sports program for all the Hi-Y's. These games afforded not only physical bruises, but also wholesome relaxation.

Aiding school and community projects, these clubs obtained the necessary financial assets through participation of members in local car washes. The Hi-Y's also sponsored a car "bash" with profits not needed for club undertakings donated to the Danville Jaycees. Completing the year, the Hi-Y's combined with Key Clubbers in GW's mass trash pick-up week.

GW'S OWN "Mr. Clean's"—Greg McDonald, Glenn Updike, Bob Brown, Alan Obye, Buddy Giles, and Don Whittaker spend their Saturdays working diligently but merrily to raise money for their Hi-Y.

"NOW WAS THAT the left foot first or the right foot first?" Nita Farthing ponders this grave problem. Fellow Kilties (Judy Motley, Judy Moore, Sherry Shepherd and Vickie Waller) talk about the intricacies of their upcoming routine.

SMILES ARE NATURAL for the leaders of GW's marching unit. Pam Hoskins, head, and Carol Alderson, co-head, help create the colorful routines that provide pleasure for interested spectators during football half-times.

Precisionists Mix Talents, Routines, Contribute to Halftimes

Try-outs, practices, football games—these were activities familiar to Kilties, Majorettes and Lettergirls. Through long hours of practice and sharing, the marching experts added action and enthusiasm to school life.

Practice began early in August, with many girls returning from beach vacations for the required pre-school sessions. Once the fall semester got underway, there were many hours of early morning practices. The intense preparation was apparent, as the half-time of each football game was marked by outstanding routines.

Majorettes, Kilties and Lettergirls performed in Christopher Stadium and at "away" games. They, along with the band, participated in the Christmas parade and at local shopping centers for special events.

HOT AIR FROM the band members would be better than this.

LETTERGIRLS Pam Davis, Vickie Hardy, Cathy Pierce, Sherey Durham.

MAJORETTES Janet Oliver, alternate, Jennifer Jones, Evelyn Bakas, Leigh Updike, head, Marty Haynesworth, Shelia Hawkins, Pam Brown, alternate.

NEITHER RAIN, SNOW nor sleet keep the GW band members from early morning practices. They, along with Kilties and Majorettes, come early each morning during football season. Though "fighting" bad weather and thoughts of getting up at 6:30, they are mindful that the show must go on.

SYMPHONIC BAND Front Row: Mike Jones, Shaun Anderson, Archie Barrow, Carlton Henderson, Doug Mills, Woody Thigpen, Larry Kidd, Ben Jones, Wanda Paxton, John Baxa. # Traveling Musicians Pack Stronger Punch for Card Attack

... And the beat goes on! On the frost-covered fields during early morning hours, GW's marching band practiced for performances at sporting events and parades. As the seasons changed, the band moved indoors, for final polishing for festivals and concerts.

Launching the year with participation at football games, the marching band played the National Anthem at each home game. At half-time they returned with varied selections. This band traveled to "away" games, where they afforded pleasure to the opponents' fans.

On the musicmakers' winter and spring schedule was an array of performances. At Christmas they offered an assembly with the chorus, featuring seasonal music. During basketball games, the pep band played current hits and the GW "fight" song. Spring Festival and Fine Arts Festival provided added experience.

INTENT ON THE challenging task of making music, Mike Purnell puckers up! Eyes on his sheet music, this young musician patiently blows to join in the mighty chorus.

Melodists Captivate Audience Through Concerts, Caroling;

Whether a classical Brahms piece or a Henry Mancini arrangement, music wafted pleasingly all day from GW's chorus room. As a result of this dedicated practice and study, the Girls' Chorus, Mixed Chorus and Concert Choir gave varied progress during the year. Combining to present interesting and melodic assemblies, they were heard both at the Yuletide season and in the spring.

Of special importance to Concert Choir members was the State Music Festival held in March. Striving for perfection, the choir performed before a board of judges.

Under the direction of Mr. John G. Howle, each class concerned itself with the musical art of vocal expression. Final performance of the year was given at solemn Baccalaureate service in the GW auditorium.

Select Groups Exhibit Scholarship, Integrity, High Ideals

One of the highest rewards of an outstanding high school career—in leadership, in academic achievement, in character and in service—is being selected for membership in the National Honor Society. In the spring and fall, excited juniors and seniors crowded into the auditorium to witness the solemn NHS tapping ceremony. Hopes were high as students anticipated which of their classmates would be given the honor. The highlight of the '69 spring assembly was an enlightening message presented by the school's principal, Mr. J. T. Christopher.

As supervisor of the program, Miss Lucille Walton found her job of certifying averages increasingly difficult as large numbers of students acquired the 91 overall average necessary for application to the Honor Society. All deadlines were met, however, and the robed GWites carried out the ceremony on schedule. To the delight of both members and non-members, the traditional "tapping" of new members was not deleted in order to economize on time.

TUTORIAL APPROVAL COMES from Miss Lucille Walton, NHS sponsor, to Doug Vass, vice-president. He glibly explains Einstein's "simple" formula or the Pythagorean theorem for ardent intellectual geniuses—Janet Ferrell, president, Nancy Lea, secretary, and Elizabeth Murray, treasurer.

Through Various Activities

Hard work, intermingled with frivolity, set the pace for the 1969-70 Key Club Calendar. Spearheading the activities of the club was the board of directors, composed of the officers and representative members of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes.

Saturday mornings, at times during the year, found the members vigorously painting house numbers on curbs. This annual project, along with selling peanut brittle and sponsoring car washes, provided money for a $100 scholarship, to be presented to some worthy GW senior.

In the spring, Saturdays found the club cleaning and painting Park Springs Camp for Underprivileged Children. Then there were the Saturday night socials.

For the first time Key Clubbers combined forces with GW's Hi-Y members for a mass campus clean-up. A project previously handled by the freshman class, the two clubs carried out an enthusiastic campaign.

Mixing a little fun with their work, the Key Clubbers held bimonthly meetings. Guest speakers, panel discussions and a dinner-dance made for a well-rounded year.

Tutoring Students Characterizes Future Educators' Agenda

The three R's—Reading, 'Riting, and 'Rithmetic—held unusual meaning for members of The Future Teachers of America. Looking forward to teaching careers at many different levels, these GW-ites, under the leadership of Miss Constance Winfield, sponsor, offered services to the local community and to the school, exploring the vast opportunities in Danville waiting for well-qualified teachers.

Among the many projects was a tutoring service. Members met individually with students, deficient in certain areas, during free periods or prior to school. Individual teachers were asked to tell their students of this special help that was available.

At Christmas, a party was given at the Richard Smith School for the mentally retarded. This afforded an opportunity for observing the teacher-student situation under unusual circumstances. It also was the club Christmas community project, along with participation in the Empty Stocking Fund.

Medics Prepare Themselves Through Volunteer Services

Continuing to inspire more students to undertake a career in medicine, the Medical Careers Club offered a year of suggestions and activities for all interested students. In addition to regular club activities, many members worked at the two city nursing homes as Blue Strippers and at Memorial Hospital as Candy Strippers.

With the help of the new male members, the first in the history of the club, the organization sold candles which were made and designed by the mentally retarded of the John F. Kennedy Flame of Hope Organization. Mrs. Mary Leigh Boisseau led the club in sponsoring a car wash.

With added funds from bake sales, the club was able to sponsor a spring trip to a nearby college. Thus the members had an opportunity to investigate a possible location for furthering their education in a medical direction. An annual spring banquet and a tour of Memorial Hospital completed the club's activities.

Spring Formal Dance Tops Year of Informative Study

"Decisions That Count" constituted a challenging theme for the Future Homemakers of America. Set before the members as guidelines were the educational goals contributing to future success. An annual membership drive in September, to interest and encourage participation, inaugurated an active year for the GW club sponsored by Mrs. Annie Laurie Sayers.

Skilled fingers and late-model appliances combined to produce many articles for the domestic displays at the Danville fair in October. When the judging was completed, blue ribbons abounded for the GW chapter-25 out of 30 entries won recognition. Accenting the fall program was a faculty tea. FHA members prepared and served the refreshments.

In April, National FHA Week was observed, with special emphasis placed on future careers. Concluding varied educational and social activities, the FHA sponsored a formal dance and picked a May Queen to reign at that dance.

FHA MEMBERS Debra Carter (v-pres.), Carolyn Sparks, Dyann McCain (sec.), Candy Long, Terry Prillaman, Debra Turner, and Mildred Rigney (treas.), busy themselves planning the FHA dance. Rhonda Yarbrough (pres.) records their ideas for future reference in making dance preparations.

Youthful Goals Center on Character Building, Improvement

New and better ways to build character and render service were the goals as Y-Teens planned the year. Combining both community and club activities, these girls contributed their services on numerous occasions. Friendly smiles and ready energy proved a winning combination.

Centering weekly programs around self-improvement, as well as service, members were concerned with a knowledge of personal hygiene. Of prime interest was an excursion to a local cosmetic studio for demonstrations. Rounding out an active year, the club members visited local nursing homes and orphanages.

Hard-Working Students Find Short School Hours Familiar

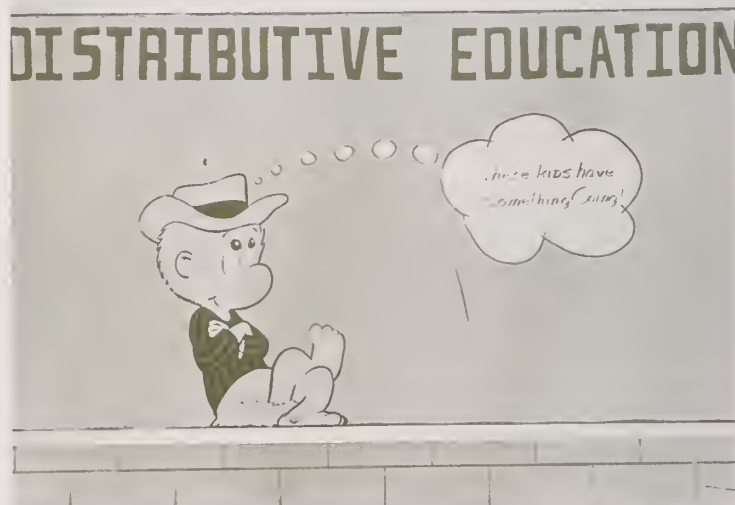

Ringling cash registers, blended in with a sincere "May I help you?", signaled the rapid pace of Distributive Education. Combining school with job experience, a fast-learning group of GW-ites prepared for future careers.

This preparation for the business world was the concern of many students who participated in the DE club, a supplement to the classroom teaching.

Fun was a large part of the DE activity, as exhibited in the club's initial program which included initiation of officers. The District Rally in October, featured a fashion show and dance.

Meeting monthly, the club members planned many different activities and money-making projects. The members competed in areas including advertising, display, public speaking, and sales demonstration in District and State DE contests.

Finalizing the year's plans was the annual banquet. The honored guests were the employers of the students.

Office Trainees Acquire Beneficial Vocational Experiences

For students who have participated in cooperative part-time vocational office training classes, GW offered membership in the Vocational Office Training Club. Only open to those students actively engaged in specific business courses, the club specialized in supplementary educational projects and in relaxation and enjoyment for its members.

Participation of members in the business field during the school year was a step toward enabling each to take an active part in community life after graduation. In an effort to achieve better understanding and cooperation between employees and employers, the VOT sponsored a banquet in the spring.

Volunteering for school office duties, a number of club members served as student secretaries. Dedicating one period each day to help with clerical and secretarial duties, they worked with teachers by taking dictation, typing and filing. They were especially valuable in using the office mimeographing machine, a mechanical monster to those who were unfamiliar with it. Helping the general office to handle problems of lost books was another activity of VOT-ers.

Industrial Job Training Supplements Classroom Instruction

Affiliation with the statewide ICT organization enabled members of GW's Industrial Cooperative Training Club to participate fully in state contests. This activity was one of many offered to members, who are specifically gearing their high school education toward job training.

The relocation of ICT club meetings was eagerly awaited each month by students in on-the-job training, obtaining an education simultaneously. Ideas were swapped.

Attending classes in the morning and working at their respective jobs in the afternoon, ICT club members had many extracurricular activities. They took part in the local Christmas Parade and later held a Yuletide Party. A banquet in the spring concluded the year's activities.

Throughout the year, the ICT students sold candy to augment their treasury and to finance trips for the district and state contests. As in the past, the members captured trophies and first place awards in the fields of hair styling, poster-making, and public speaking.

ADDITION, SUBTRACTION, MULTIPLICATION, and division call for correct use of calculating machines. ICT president, Peggy Chumley, and secretary, Susan Murphy, demonstrate the way to efficiency. Fellow officers include: Evans Thompson, reporter; Jim Pickrel, vice-president; John Brown, parliamentarian; and Barbara Whitlock, treasurer.

"Miss Ideal Secretary" Election Highlights Spring Activities

New to George Washington's club life was the Future Business Leaders of America, better known by its initials FBLA. Leaders of the club, Miss Mina Koons and Miss Betty Farmer, sponsored the various activities as it took its place as an integral part of the GW community. Receiving support from the many business students, the club attained recognition for its members.

Highlighting the year's activities was an election held in the spring for the "Miss Ideal Secretary." Preceding this election, various eligible students were rated as to their reliability, capability, and initiative for the honorary title.

Another important phase of the year's activities was the annual state meeting of all business educators in Virginia, which GW had the honor of hosting. During the meeting, FBLA members participated as guides for those unfamiliar with the school.

Actors Strive for Perfection; Develop Theatrical Skills

GW's actors and actresses, future stars of stage and screen, took the opportunity during the year to entertain fellow students and the public while developing their dramatic talents. The students carrying major roles in these acting and production endeavors were recognized through selection for membership in the Thespians, the national dramatics organization.

Mastering the arts of projection, articulation, poise and self-control, the performers gave merit-deserving accounts of themselves in full-length plays. A spring banquet rounded out a full year of rewarding activities for the Thespians.

Yuletide Smorgasbord Reflects Year of Swedish Influence

Pickled and smoked fish, blue cheese, dark bread and blonde foreign exchange student Ingrid Jonsson added to the Scandinavian atmosphere at the IRC Christmas Smorgasbord. The International Relations Club enjoyed a year of Swedish influence, as its members, and all of GW, welcomed Ingrid to her new temporary home.

With the suggestions of sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Miller, IRC members became more aware of world situations. In addition to their regular meetings, at which speakers told about their experiences in foreign countries, the club hosted a reception honoring Ingrid and the 1970 American Field Service candidates.

An innovation in the club's agenda was the sale of AFS Christmas cards. This added to the fund used to send a GW junior abroad each summer. As sponsors of the AFS at GW, IRC members held a schoolwide campaign to raise money for the exchange program.

Citizenship Presents Everyday Challenge to Future Voters

Campaigning politically, beautifying America, and promoting patriotism attracted the attention of Civics Club members. For these GW-ites good citizenship was an everyday challenge.

Club programs were geared to promote qualities of a good citizen—maturity, civic responsibility, and enlightenment as to government agencies. Throughout the year various political figures, social workers, and interested citizens were invited for programs. A notable occasion was the presentation of the Democratic and Republican platforms by Danville citizens representing each party. Changes that need to be made in the state government were the topics discussed.

Local problems were of utmost importance to the Civics Club. A talk by the head of the junior volunteers at Memorial Hospital, concerning mounting needs there, led to a spirited discussion period. Observing a city council meeting was, also, part of the "education" of Civics members. Watching local government in action provided insight into legislative workings.

Initiating the year's activities was the election of officers and new members. New to the agenda of club activities was the selling of programs prior to basketball games. The annual Civics scholarship award was presented in the spring to a college-bound senior.

COMP

ETITION

In the kaleidoscope of a cheering crowd and mud-splattered uniforms there is constant anticipation of an upset victory or of defeat in the last moments. But, most important of all, there is always an integrity of performance, the excellence of individual achievement. This wish of superiority is illustrated vividly on the competitive fields of GW—whether under the powerful lights of J. T. Christopher stadium or of the gym, GW athletes play to win.

Varsity Squad Challenges Opponents in Successful Season

TASKS OF THE DEFENSE prove more difficult than just stopping the fleet-footed backfield men. After checking for the draw play, linebacker Gary Heady and middle-guard Ed Pratt show their resourcefulness by converging on a streaking receiver. Their responsibility was to intercept or knock down the pass.

Suffering disparaging defeats in their first three games, the rooted 1969 Cardinal squad bounced back and won five of their last six games. The young Cards gave 100% in order to beat the always-tough Lane team and the threatening Jefferson Senior squad.

The defensive skills of returning lettermen (Heady, Pratt, Jeff Williams, Steve Neely), aided by the improving talents of Neophytes (Jim Thomas, David Savage, David Clay, Pat Daly, Sammy Davis, and Scott Mustain) were able to produce one of the best defenses in the district. This (combined with the offensive performance of Brumfield, Phil Daly, Harvey Willis, Jake Burrell, Charles Davis, Jim Hedricks, David Evans, and George Perry) made one of the toughest challenges in the Western District.

DEFENSIVE GAMBLE PAYS OFF as Pat Daly makes his break and picks off a Martinsville pass. Grasping hands of the lone Bulldog were met with disappointment. A leap (below) from Harvey Willis gains yardage. These two plays were typical of the expert cooperation between the defensive and offensive units.

Proving to be more than what Coach Dick Pruitt had expected, the JV's of GW produced a four and two record. Hard practice and coordinated teamwork were vital in building the winning season.

The young Cards were hurt by the loss of some of their valuable players to the Varsity squad. The junior varsity offense was led by Rick Gambrell, Bob Ladd, Joe Haley, Keith Quesenberry, Chris Baker, Peter Dunbeck, Mike Pruitt, Alan McGregor and Mike Puffaff. The defensive charge was led by Tony Ward, Mark Moore, and Philip Hall. The young Cards had an awesome offensive performance throughout the 1969 campaign. Their game scores often resembled basketball's. The future seasons of GW football teams appear to have quite a good start over their Western District opponents.

Varsity Cagers Overpower Toughest Competition in Years

Proving pre-season polls wrong for the second time in as many years, Cardinals surprised the "experts" by holding second place in the District at the Christmas break. The record showed two wins, one loss in the District, three and two over-all. There were one-point victories over Fleming and Morehead, a three-point win over Halifax.

Later the Cards ran into the top-rated teams in the District. Despite the desire and hustle, and the all-round play of Steve Smoral, All-District scoring leader, the Birds could not match strength with Jefferson Senior, Martinsville and Patrick Henry, especially after losing two starters due to academic casualties.

Yet, even with such competition, the Cards excelled. There was an overtime loss to Martinsville. There were stunning defeats of Patrick Henry (74-55), of E.C. Glass (56-55).

What the pollsters failed to take into account was an acknowledged fact: the Cardinal basketball squad wanted to play basketball. They did, to the point where Coach Ben Kendall said they "were some of the best boys I have worked with."

HIGH SCORER Steve Smoral utilizes the baseline for an easy layup. Cardinal teammates (Harvey Willis, Emerson Phillips and Charlie Davis) move in for rebounds against Halifax County players (Bill Maxwell, Alan Parham, Frosty Owen, Alan Gravitt and Donnie Tanksley).

Resourceful Junior-Varsity Insures Skillful Future Squad

Precision passes and fine ball handling marked the Jayvee basketball season. The Cards had dazzling ball handlers (such as Roger Anderson, Marty Smoral, Hunter Bendall, and Pat Daly). The Cardinals also did an excellent job on the boards.

For most of the season Coach Dave Brown had to rely on the skills of Jake Cabell, John Bruce and Mark Raper. Jake Cabell was promoted to varsity at half season. The young Cards were aided on the boards by sophomore Paul Lewis.

The Red Birds finished out the campaign with a 11-7 record. Jayvees dropped a close game with Martinsville. At the end of regulation time, the game was in deadlock at 52 all. In overtime the Cards were outscored and at the final buzzer the scoreboard showed GW 52, Martinsville 59.

Go Cards!

THE UPS AND DOWNS of school life are illustrated by the human pyramid, formed by such lovely, lovely constructionists! Varsity cheerleaders so engaged: Kirk Bidgood, Candace Waugh (co-head), Jeannette Love, Sue Hodges, Ann Slayton, Pam Floyd (co-head), Margaret Parker, Taylor Bidgood and Judy Ingram. Taking the part of the mischievous fiend, Nancy Lindsey gleefully topples the somewhat unstable edifice.

Original Cheers Activate School-Spirited Sports Enthusiasts

V-V-Victory for Var-Var-Varsity! Ra, Rah, Ra! Such rythmical sounds, sent into the air by a bouncing bevy of beauties, led enthusiastic fans in a cheer for their favorite team. Long hours of steady practice, including sessions once a week during the summer and for the entire third and fourth weeks in August, culminated in a spirited group geared for spectator leadership—the Varsity cheerleaders.

Form, coordination and cheers are perfected through rigid drills. This, however, is only the beginning of a cheerleader's many duties.

Creative posters and announcements, informing the student body of upcoming activities, had to be made for each game. Showcases had to be filled with entertaining and fan-inspiring announcements—and, at times, even an occasional trapped cheerleader.

Selling ribbons and tickets, organizing bus trips, conducting pep rallies and decorating for homecoming occupied the squad's time. In addition, the cheerleaders offered their assistance at the football picnic and the football and basketball banquets. Finally, members entertained the Patrick Henry cheerleaders as their "spare time" activity. This took the form of a dinner.

Working closely with the Varsity members, J.V. and Frosh cheerleaders inspired their respective teams as they trained through experience for future service. Faculty sponsor for the Varsity was Miss Gwen Dalton. Directing Jr. Varsity and Frosh squads were Mrs. Vivian Parrish, Miss Peggy Moir and Mrs. Ursula Abercrombie.

J-V CHEERLEADERS Leah Fitzgerald, Sallie Shadrick, Beth Pritchett, Harriet Haynsworth, Debbie Crawford, Nina Wells, Pat Douglas, Martha Taylor.

Matherson, Ed Brooks, Coach Bob Reed, Randy Owen, Rodney Ashby, Tony Carr. They compiled a 12-1-1 record.

Crushing Defeat of Hargrave Highlights Wrestling Season

QUICK PIN for Dave Hughes!

Slap! The referee's hand signified another pin. Wrestlers of George Washington, coached by Mr. Bob Reed, showed many good reasons why they could produce another Western District trophy for the show case.

The Grapplers finished the 1970 campaign with a 12, 1 and 1 record. The only setbacks for the matmen came at the hands of the Martinsville Bulldogs. The Cards tied Martinsville in their first meeting of the season, but were defeated 19-21 in the return match at Martinsville. The wrestlers gave promise of doing well in the Regional as well as the State Tournament.

Racketeers Rack Up Successes With Strengthened Teams

QUICK RETURN AND intense concentration mark Louise Dibrell's success.

IF CAROLYN CARTER continues hitting as well as she does in practice, soon she'll be ready to out-match her upcoming opponent.

Reaping the benefits of five years' practice and instruction, the GW netwomen chalked up an impressive 3-1 season. The '69 racketeers terminated their season with a 6-4 record. Strengthened by returning players, the squads were confident of a better performance in '70.

The girls' '69 team was composed of Carter, Louise Dibrell, Beverly Talbott, Martha Taylor, Delores Gates, Pam Jones, Gwen Johnson, and Lynn Bailey. They began their season with a 4-3 victory over E. C. Glass. (This marked arch-rival Glass' first defeat in girls' tennis.) The Lady Cards were defeated, however, when the Hilltoppers came for their return match.

Danville met the Lady Comets of Halifax (at home) with a full steam to soundly overcome them by a score of 6-1. The final match of the '69 season was held in Halifax, where the Cards emerged with a 5-1 victory.

During the spring of '69, Don Ball received the Most Outstanding Player award at the spring sports banquet. Sophomore T. K. Farley brought further honors to the GW netmen by advancing to the regional finals.

Coach Ben Kendall rated the group: "This is the best boys' team we have had since I came to GW." Because of so little difference between the skills of the players, the squad was a well-balanced one.

Cards Do It Again . . .

Powerful and consistent hitting blasted the '69 Cards into another first place in Western District competition. GW took second place honors in a Regional game, as they bowed 5 to 4 to Virginia High of Bristol.

In losing many senior standouts (Ricky Harris, Harry Whitt, Allen McGregor, Mike Payne, and Jackie Fitts) Coach Dick Pruitt nevertheless predicted an outstanding team in 1970. Many capable players returned. Back on the field were Richard Adams, Karey Walker, Alan Brumfield, Jake Day, Randy Owen, Allen Herndon, and John Bailey.

Coach Pruitt gave high praise to several veterans who contributed their skills to help the '69 team win. Harris led the pitching staff with 9 wins and 1 loss. His only defeat came in the Regionals at the hand of Virginia High. The Cards boasted a hitters' season, with such as Whitt, Harvey Willis, Brumfield and Owen. Supplementary to the seasoned hitters were promising newcomers.

Hitting and defense proved strong points of the '70 team. Pitching posed a problem for the Cards, but Coach Pruitt thinks hurlers Adams, Walker and Day can hold their own. After several seasons of outstanding pitchers (such as Eddie Booth and Harris) these men had something to strive toward. Utilizing team effort and skill, the '70 baseball team promised another highly successful season.

WITH THE SPEED and style of a Sandy Koufax, Ricky Harris shows the form which led him to a 9-1 season record.

ALERT AND READY, the opposing catcher awaits the throw from his teammate in right field. Under the watchful eye of the umpire, Harry Whitt streaks down the third-base line and across home plate to put the Cards on the scoreboard.

CAPTURED IN A RARE moment of rest from their athletic schedules, Steve Lester, John Newhouse, Meadors, Bob Ladd and Steve Echols muster up strength. On the agenda is a series of warm-up laps, invaluable prelude to an important tri-meet.

Hurriers Singe Cinders, Outdistance Stopwatch

Overcoming numerous obstacles, the '69 Thinclads completed a successful season. Coach Brown commented, "This was a season of bad breaks for our track team. Injuries cost us James Bethel for the entire season, while Joe Giles was lost in the first meet of the season."

Because of the absence of these two key members, and a number of other costly disqualifications, the cindermen lost by two points to a strong Fleming team. Coach Brown pointed out that the starting of indoor track in the spring of '69 helped in producing a successful season.

The Roadrunners attended an invitational meet with nine competitors. Finishing a close second, the team advanced their record to 4 wins and 3 losses.

The '70 track team was deprived of proficient graduating seniors: Rick Donaldson, Steve Lester, Giles, Bethel, John Meadors, Robert Conley, Allen Pickeral, Harry Whitt, Phil Dishman, Maynard Reynolds, Micky Dowdy, Everett Stratton, Nelson Moore and Harper Donahoe.

Returning to contribute to the success of '70 were: Bob Ladd, who broke the school record for the 880; John Newhouse, who broke the record for the mile run; and Phil Daly, who was the number-one scorer last year, holder of the school record for the 440.

DETERMINATION IS EVIDENT as Ray Rucco receives encouragement from Jackie Silverman.

AFTER COMPLETING A SUCCESSFUL approach, Harry Whitt bounds into a perfect straddle-roll and masterfully clears the bar.

IPATION

In June '76 every student at GW will have received their first degree of preparation for adult life. In the progression from freshman to senior, students will find today's general education and college education a worthwhile part of the present as preparation for the future. Within the classroom of GW there is frequent evidence that in the academic adventure of students, each discovers his own special function in the adult world.

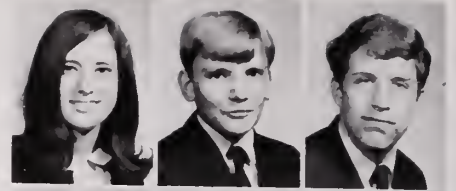

FINALLY FINDING SOMETHING to blow their horns about, Steve Eckels and Randy Brooks can hardly silence their glee.

Initial Days of Testing Skills:

Facing the fate of being regarded as low men on the totem pole, GW's freshmen soon learned to ignore the label of "youngsters," as they found themselves plunged head-first into Senior High life. They were immediately confronted with the dreaded SCAT and STEP tests in August.

In between testing sessions, the newcomers practiced following their schedules with the hopeful idea that finding their way around would not prove too difficult. CAVALIER editors, who arrived early to begin work, offered guidance at times. Weary frosh soon learned, however, that depending on the upperclassmen sometimes could be a drastic mistake! (Of course there were the self-sufficient who trusted their own judgment—just a little too much.)

During the first assembly, the newcomers learned—the hard way!—that the center section of the auditorium is always exclusively reserved for seniors. Freshman actively participated in competitive sports, laying the groundwork for possible varsity performances in later years. A major segment of the honor roll regularly listed freshmen, indicating their intellectual prowess and their participation in the academic program. (For shame, upperclassmen!)

Fall Sets Stage for Year No. 2

Survivors of that year returned to GW with a frame of mind quite different from that of the previous year. In opposition to the freshman emotion of fear, sophs were increasingly secure, perhaps more anxious to return to school because of their probable freshman prey.

This time there was the privilege of entering GW's halls on the same day as seniors, since both these classes were exempt from testing. Sensing their new position in the world of senior high life, they cheered a little louder at ballgames, yelled a little louder in the halls, and spoke a little more freely in class.

Having achieved some status, sophomores guilelessly and glibly sold third-floor swimming pool tickets to gullible frosh. There were recollections of "unfortunate" experiences of their former year, no doubt!

Growing pains gradually abated. Sophs in time became more involved in club activities, sports, and general school work in place of "frosh-plaguing."

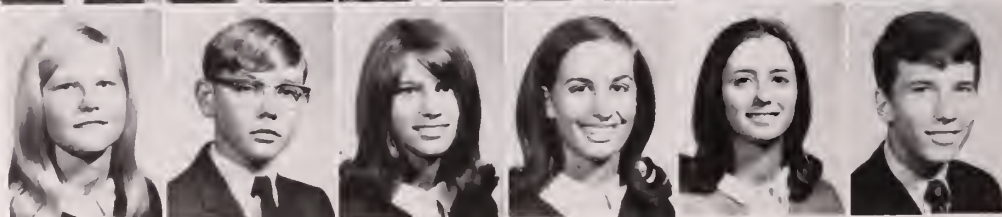

Sophomores busied their year with translating Caesar, dissecting slimy frogs, smelling formaldehyde, proving geometry theorems, taunting teachers, serving as soph waiters and waitresses, and attending assemblies.

Cheering at JV games, entertaining at the Junior-Senior Banquet, reading The Once and Future King, and frightening PE teachers on the driver's course contributed to a successful year of learning.

Just one step away from the last rung on the ladder of secondary education! Juniors launched a second year characterized by new-found prestige and honor.

They proceeded with the traditional practices of pestering each other for help in unearthing the answers to those impossible algebra problems, to that hard Latin translation. PSAT, SAT, and NMSQT tests loomed on the horizon, to be conquered.

Combining the curricular responsibilities and extra-curricular fun, juniors were major contributors in all organizational activities. Four were elected leaders of the SCA. Many promoted school spirit, serving on the Varsity and Junior Varsity squads in sports and cheerleading. Those with creative abilities used their talents to produce prize-winning publications.

Juniors "sneaked" (officially!) a preview of the senior lounge on Class Day. Many "pre-seniors" attended the prom, enjoyed the Junior-Senior Banquet, and anxiously awaited cherished senior class rings. The Junior Variety Show was planned and executed as a money-making project. Talent enhancing the Junior treasury, however, was discovered from all four classes.

For many juniors there was the thrill of being tapped into the National Honor Society during special assemblies in the fall and in the spring.

SENIOR

Happening Class of 1970 Takes Leadership Responsibilities;

"RING OUT THE old and bring in The New" is the motto of class officers Martha Ward, v-pres.; Anne Slayton, treas.; and David Savage, pres.

Special senior privileges made everyday routines just a little easier for the class of '70. Following their curriculum preferences, seniors were able to enroll in advanced, concentrated study courses. For many, the classroom hours ticked away too fast, especially during those periods of elective study.

Many students took advantage of the ICT, DE and VOT programs and left school (officially, no less!) after only a few classes. They had a bit more money jingling in the pockets, along with opportunities to get first-hand knowledge in contemplating careers.

The Happening Class of '70 strived for perfection in various endeavors, taking over the tremendous responsibilities involved in directing and editing publications. They entertained the student body with the Senior play. National Honor Society listed sixty-one seniors as academically superior. A Swedish exchange student was welcomed. Meanwhile, an unusually large percentage of the class applied to colleges and (hopefully!) kept up high averages.

Then there was: getting out of first period class for a college conference; effecting a cough in class (and curing it in Senior Lounge!); arguing over which soap opera to watch. Activities on the lighter side? Plenty! Consider: collecting trash for the bonfire at the garbage dump; sitting in the center section in those exclusive assemblies; sneaking a few extra peanuts from the broken snack machine; and touring "Big D" with the government classes.

ELATION

Whether socializing over assembly-line hamburgers, struggling along local alleys (!) with bulky bowling balls, or working to foster growth in the daily lives of fellow citizens, each GW student is sharing in the local financial endeavor. Together, regional and national advertising is fashioned to attract the attention of today's fast-moving public of young trend-setters. Who is being better instructed to shape the Danville of tomorrow than the youth of GW?

AVERETT COLLEGE

This is Averett. It offers more than a four-year college degree program for men and women. Humanities, fine arts, natural sciences, social science and professional studies are part of the curriculum.

Self-identity, growth, freedom matched with responsibility are part of the opportunities.

Averett can mean for you a new dimension in learning.

Averett can mean an adventure in learning.

Finding this dimension is up to you.

NEXT . . . STRATFORD-ON-THE-MOON?

It's not as far-fetched an idea as you might suppose . . .

Stratford College has added some new dimensions lately to its liberal arts program for young women . . . new courses, new faculty, new buildings . . . and new ideas.

Stratford believes that the full educational potential of its students may be extended by providing opportunities for study in environments specifically suited to their academic fields.

Thus, Stratford's Abroad Programs cater to the languages with the Stratford-in-Spain and Stratford-in-France. There is Stratford-in-Italy, a summer program for study of the fine arts. And, for those interested in English literature and history, there is a Stratford-in-England summer study-tour.

With new programs being added each year to Stratford's four-year curriculum, anything . . . anywhere . . . is possible. Come to Stratford and watch her grow.

DOUBLE DUTY KEEPS Donnie Parrish, Grady Love and Bonnie Callahan busy. Not only do they represent all of GW, as SCA representatives, but they have taken special interest in their junior class as Pres., V.-P., and Treas.

"WE AREN'T REALLY sneaking out to lunch," Mildred Rigney explains in a worried tone while Linda Davis smiles innocently.

HAPPILY DEMONSTRATING the joys of sewing, Phyllis Smith warns Jeanette Thompson about putting her finger under the needle.

ARE OFFICE HELPERS Vivian Perkins and Gennie Zeaman really that busy or are they just posing for a picture that will make their fellow GWites think so?

GLEEFULLY LAUGHING AT the name "Brenda Bracp," Donna Haywood questions the skill of a typist who helped fix the supplementary student index.

WOEFULLY "SCRUBBING UP" to perform delicate surgery on an unwanted report card Carol Crump and Joyce Handy smile as they are caught in the act.

IN COUNCIL WITH fellow Cavalier staff members, Terry Adams shows Martin Garrett and Alan Obye a very necessary piece of photography equipment.

CAVALIER '70 was printed by Taylor Publishing Company, Dallas, Texas. Mr. Bud Rose of Richmond served as company consultant. In the Dallas plant, Mr. Norman Dowdy was technical adviser, Mrs. Gloria Weadock, company representative. Mr. W. F. Cuddington of Roanoke was staff photographer. The cover was designed by the staff.

Paper used is dull enamel with Spartan body type, including italics. The headlines are set in Futura Medium, 24 point. Body copy is 10 point; captions, 8 point; identities, 8 point, set solid.

The CAVALIER staff acknowledges the gracious and invaluable co-operation of the GWHS administration, the Register and Bee Publishing Company, and the staff of Taylor Publishing Company.

Signs aren't necessary here! There's nothing mystical about a good year-book or the staff that makes it possible. It's the end result of a lot of hard work. But, special talents play their part, too. So just for fun, let's take a look again at the people who used their talents to make CAVALIER '70 stellar!

The George Washington High School student is a person, an individual going somewhere, striving to find his identity as a person in order to be better prepared for personal fulfillment, for serving others. Hopefully, the directions accorded him in the all-important basic high school years will not be forgotten.

With the arrival of June, signs of the times are unmistakable ... sadness in parting, joy in achieving, loyalty in recollecting. In today's adventure the GW-ite searches for knowledge, following sure signs ... and a star ... Tomorrow's adventure will put learning to the test. Tomorrow's accomplishment will unfold the potential significance of the myriad signs.
